We wandered where the breakers roar,
We rode the ponies on the sand,
Whispered soft nothings o'er and o'er,
Partook of chowder, heard the band;
And as we watched the bathers trim
Display their wealth of form and limb,
She said she'd like to learn to swim.

We parted at the bathing-place;
She reappeared, a queen of girls,
A charming blush upon her face,
Her head o'errun with golden curls;
And as she came to my embrace
She murmured with a dainty grace:
"Please do not wet my head or face."

Aye! she should be my future bride—
This I resolved, beyond a doubt,
As, holding her above the tide,
I watched her wildly striking out.
I failed to notice—woe is me!—
A breaker booming in from sea
That seized my love and tore her free.

Six somersaults that maiden turned;
She coughed and spluttered, groaned and yelled.
All thoughts of danger then I spurned
Until again her form I held.
Her form? And yet it could not be.
What tricks had Neptune in the sea
Been playing with my love and me?

Her face was wizened, brown and bleared,
Her eyes had lost their lustrous light,
Her golden curls had disappeared,
Her figure was a dreadful sight;
And as I dragged her in from view
She chattered through her lips, so blue:
"I've lost my teeth! What shall I do?"

EDWARD E. KIDDER.

THE THREE GRACES.

WRITTEN FOR THE NEW YORK CLIPPER,
BY JAMES WIGHT.

The last Count Maulevrier of the Hermitage, St. Helier, was a soldier and a scamp—an extraordinary being, compounded of extremes. He married a stage beauty, who bore him three daughters, whom he insisted upon naming after the Three Graces. When Aglaia, the eldest, was twenty, Thalia seventeen, and Euphrosyne ten, the old man had squandered his Channel Island property and was ruined without remedy. He accepted the situation with characteristic nonchalance. He went straight to his wife and said gayly:

"My dearest Edith, we are ruined. 'The Graces' and ourselves have not a thousand francs that we can call our own. Funny, isn't it?"

The Countess, not expecting such a revelation, swooned away.

"Aglaia! Thalia! Rosyne! here, my dears!" shouted the Count. "Bring the cologne; your dearest mother has fainted. I was just telling her that we were teetotally ruined; the news was a little too much for her."

For several days there were lamentation and mourning and woe in the Maulevrier household. On the last day of the year Aglaia beheld her father cracking jokes in a threadbare coat. He had been disposing of the last half-dozen silver teaspoons, and he had spent half the proceeds in brandy and cigars.

On the morning of the New Year, when the family sat at breakfast, Aglaia said with affected gayety, while she handed her mother a crisp five-pound note:

"Here, mother, is money; let us dine luxuriously. In two days my engagement begins at the Princess Theatre in London. The manager who saw me in the private theatricals last Winter, to whom I recently wrote, assures me of success, and offers me an immediate engagement."

"Aglaia, you are mad! You forget yourself—you are the eldest daughter of the Count Maulevrier!" cried the faded old aristocrat, bristling up.

"If you dishonor yourself by appearing on the public stage I will disown you as a sister," said Thalia bitterly.

The poor mother burst into hysterical tears. Euphrosyne regarded the group with the displaced astonishment of childhood. Finally she rose from her seat, threw her arms around her eldest sister's neck, and whispered between kisses:

"Take me to London, Agley, and buy me a wax doll and some caramels!"

"If my eldest daughter adopts the stage," said the Count sententiously, "my malediction, as head of the ancient house of Maulevrier, shall descend upon her."

Aglaia reminded him that her mother had adorned the stage. The Count began to curse.

"Heaven will avert the calamity; you will be struck dumb or blind!" he cried.

"Monsieur! for shame!" cried the Countess.

"Father! you forget yourself!" said Aglaia calmly.

They all rose from their seats. Madame was shocked. Aglaia was determined in her project. Thalia was offended. The Count went out to visit a thirsty cronny. Euphrosyne bustled herself with her few well-worn toys.

Aglaia Maulevrier inherited her father's temperament and wayward character with her mother's beauty. A headstrong, proud and rebellious child, at nineteen she had the form of a Juno united to the laughing face of an Iro, inasmuch that the cure of the parish remarked concerning her:

"Yes, she is rightly named; Aglaia means 'splendor.' I think the Sorceress of Old Nile must have looked like that."

While her father was engaged in a prolonged dissipation Aglaia left her home without bidding her sisters good-bye. To her mother she said at parting:

"I am going to try the world on my own account. I know my own worth, and I am going to make the most of myself. Fortune carries to triumph the woman who dares, as water supports the bold swimmer. Good-bye, mother! I am going to be—somebody; but not a Maulevrier."

Weeks passed, but no word was heard from the adventurous girl. Affairs waxed worse with the Maulevriers. The Count dropped dead in the streets of St. Helier of apoplexy. Thalia eloped with the son of a Channel fisherman and died a year after in childbirth. Madame Maulevrier and her youngest daughter, eleven years old, were left alone and friendless. Succor came to them when least expected. When Edith Wood was a shining star on the British stage her younger brother Edwin emigrated to America, where he prospered. A short obituary notice of the death of the last Count Maulevrier reached him in the Western States. Up to that hour he had been unaware that the deceased spendthrift had married his beautiful sister Edith. The notice equivocally hinted that the widow and her daughters were left in somewhat unfortunate circumstances. The next mail carried a letter to his widowed sister, and subsequent communications furnished liberal pecuniary assistance. When Thalia died the broken-hearted woman sought Aglaia in London. The girl had become haughty and imperious. Refusing to see her mother, she wrote that their roads in life forever diverged, that her father and sister were "well out of a world in which they subserved neither useful nor ornamental purposes."

The letter acted like a stab-wound. The poor mother, receiving it in the little room on Bedford street, fell hysterically weeping on Rosyne's neck, crying:

"Agley spurns us, darling! O God! I cannot stand it! My heart is breaking! 'Rosy,' dearest!—write—oh, this terrible pain!—write to your sister."

The trials of the stricken woman were over. The landlady found the orphan girl sitting with folded hands, calm and fearless, contemplating her mother's corpse.

"I shall not write to Agley," she said, as if soliloquizing; "I shall write to my American uncle."

"Poor dear, her mind is wandering; and no wonder," said the motherly woman, stooping to caress her.

"Don't!—keep away!" cried the girl; "my mind is as right as yours. How much will it cost to bury mother decently?"

The philosopher Swedenborg taught that the father supplies the soul of the child, while the mother furnishes the body. The Three Graces of the house of Maulevrier were illustrations of that theory.

When the remains of the Countess were laid to rest in Kensal-green Cemetery, Euphrosyne patiently waited for a remittance from her uncle. Instead of sending a draft and a sympathizing letter, Edwin Wood resolved to hasten to the assistance of his niece in person.

"Sissy, my love, I tried to write, but I couldn't get out onto paper what was into me, nohow," he said when he met and embraced Rosy; "so you see I said to my old woman: 'Hang it, Teresa, I can't write what I want to say; guess I'll have to go 'cross and speak it to the poor little lass.' And Teresa, she says: 'Ask Lawyer Riggie to write it.' Hang Lawyer Riggie!" I says: 'I am going across to see the bit lass myself, and bring her home with me.' And now, sissy—I tell ye, you're as putty as a picture!—won't you go to America with Uncle Ed, eh?"

"I suppose so, uncle," she said smilingly.

"She don't seem to take on much about her ma's death, does she?" Mr. Wood remarked to the landlady as he settled her account.

"Not outwardly, at all events, sir," replied the good woman; "but perhaps she feels it the more."

"Hardly seems natural," said Mr. Wood; "her mother wasn't anything like that."

Miss Rosy Maulevrier found a luxurious home in America. The Woods were childless, and they lavished the latent tenderness of their hearts upon the orphaned girl. Mr. Wood was a wealthy man, and he made no secret of the fact that he had adopted Rosy as his daughter and heiress. Notwithstanding the brilliancy of her prospects, the young lady grew up dissatisfied with what she called the dullness and monotony of her existence. Admirers she had in plenty, for she was exceedingly pretty, but she rejected all alike.

Her uncle and aunt vainly tried to guide and direct their im- perious, coquettish niece, reminding her that true human hearts were precious and should not be trampled upon ruth- lessly and crushed, as she was doing. Whereupon she would glance at the mirror and remark:

"Ah, well, uncle, there's time enough; I am but nineteen; I don't want a lover like those I see around here; I want to meet a sort of Caesar or hero or demigod, and make a conquest of him."

At two-and-twenty her uncle and aunt were dead, and she was alone in the world, with a fortune which constituted her in the eyes of society wealthy. Her money was invested in bonds, and her heart was untouched. It was under these circumstances that she paid her first visit to New York, and walked forth one morning in May in the upper part of Broad- way. She was dressed in slight mourning, not because she mourned for her uncle, who had been dead six weeks, but be- cause it was the correct thing to do, and because mourning became her. We have said that she was pretty. A few par- ticulars may be desirable. Her form was as nearly perfect as the most exacting critic could desire. Her nose was straight, thin and delicately chiseled. Her eyes were large and lumin- ous, of a greenish hazel color. Her eyebrows were arched like Cupid's bow, her chin was superb, her teeth were radiantly perfect. Her complexion betrayed a tinge of color that rivalled the dog-rose, and the head was crowned with black hair, worn in natural curls.

Glancing fittily at the store-windows as she leisurely walked along, her eye suddenly fell upon a picture. It was not a painting by a great artist, but a photographic portrait. Is it necessary to add that it was the portrait of a man?

She lingered, absorbed, in front of the picture. Here at last was a man she could love. Here surely were the head of Adonis, the eye of Mars, the laughing mouth of Bacchus, the lithe form of the Belvedere Mercury. Walking into the "studio," she asked if the picture was for sale.

"You mean that portrait of Markham Raymond?"

"Yes."

"What is the price?"

The portrait merchant glanced at the lovely face, perceived the look of eager expectancy traced thereon, and instantly re- solved to raise the price four hundred per cent.

"Two dollars," he said; "it is the only picture I have left, and the negative was destroyed in a fire a month since."

She was secretly shocked at the lowness of the figure. Two dollars for a demigod! She paid the money and returned to her rooms in the Windsor with the picture.

"Isn't he a lovely, incomparable man?" she said to her maid; "his name is Markham Raymond; isn't that a delight- ful name? Do you think he would like me, Sally?"

"Sure he couldn't help it," said Sally. "Who is the gentle- man, anyhow, ma'am?"

"I haven't the least idea, Sally, and I forgot to ask, stupid that I was."

"I think I saw his name among the theatrical news of THE CLIPPER," said Sally, running for the paper. "Yes, sure here it is; he's an actor. He lately played an engagement in New York, and now he is on his way to London to play at Sadler's Wells."

"Then pack the trunks, Sally; we will sail for Europe by the next steamer."

"Of course it's just as you say," answered the pert maid; "but before I was running across the sea after a man like that I'd consult a fortune-teller and see if there was any luck in it."

Miss Maulevrier was not exempt from superstition, and soon after she was ushered into the sanctum of an astrologer. Handing him the picture, she inquired if his art enabled him to tell if the original would ever be her husband? After con- siderable pondering over an astrological figure of her nativity, he said:

"There appears to be great difficulty in the way; you might become his wife, but the result would be almost cer- tain misery."

"I am not seeking your advice," she curtly said; "I merely want to know if I shall be his wife. Shall I meet him and marry him?"

"Yes," he answered; "unless, being thus forewarned, you avoid the unhappiness sure to be yours. The result rests en- tirely with yourself. Your hero is clearly a vain, weak man."

"You are evidently a fool and a charlatan!" she said with flashing eyes as she bounced out of the office.

Six weeks later Miss Maulevrier occupied a box in Sadler's Wells Theatre and had the felicity of feeling that she was the cynosure of all eyes. Dressed in corded white-silk, decollete, her charming neck and arms flashing with jewels, she sat be- side an elderly hired duenna, impatiently awaiting the rising of curtain upon the first scene of "The Lady of Lyons," with the handsome Markham Raymond in the leading role. Her interest during the progress of the acts was absolutely pain- ful, in the sense of physical pain, and she felt that she would have sacrificed everything dear to her to play Pauline to his Claude.

One circumstance aroused a flutter of indignation in her heart. The Pauline was handsome and intellectual, and her love, as pierced by a jealous woman's discernment, was no stage-feigning—it was an affectionate reality.

When she returned to her hotel a conversation was under- way in the ladies' parlor respecting the play.

"Raymond is a fine actor, and plays the part well," said one.

"Quite so," said a matronly lady; "but not in my opinion better than Miss Melville plays Pauline."

"Pauline!" cried half-a-dozen young married women in chorus; "she's a stick!"

"I agree with you, ladies," said Miss Maulevrier; "is it the fact that she is Mr. Markham Raymond's—ah—wife?"

"You bet your sweet life," said a dashing little brunette; "she wouldn't be permitted to support Raymond in the role of Pauline were she not his wife."

Miss Maulevrier laughed a bitter, mocking laugh, and soon after retired to her room to worry and inwardly curse her bad luck—to lose and fume in bed, but not to sleep.

Women of this type are liable to cling with great tenacity to a mad infatuation. She attended the theatre regularly, and Raymond, who was excessively vain and weak, soon began to play to and to talk about his "mash." The temptress knew, for she had read in some of her favorite French authors, that there is a sorcery in the physical curves of a beautiful woman, and a madness and intoxication when the passion is an unholy one. Markham Raymond's heart soon became a battle-field. Within him was going on a furious contest between the soul and the senses—between the love for his wife, which was purity, and the love of the siren, which was pruriency.

It soon became self-evident that opportunity alone was needed to precipitate a fervent liaison. That opportunity soon ar- rived, and the approaching thunder-clouds met and burst. As they mutually expressed it, they "couldn't help loving each other." The plea is as old as sin and as young as to-day.

"I thought once," he said to Rosy, "that I loved my wife; but my love for her no more resembled my love for you than the fitting fireside on the lawn resemble the ever-lasting fires of Sirius, the mighty dog-star!"

"We couldn't help loving each other, darling," she whis- pered; "when I saw your picture, something told me it was to be. Fate, in some way, will permit you to become all my own—my very, very, only, only own!"

It was a Summer evening, and they were seated beneath a mighty tree in Hyde Park. With the last words her rosebud lips were pressed to his in a wildly emotional kiss.

The thunder-clouds had met, and now the lightning-arrow descended.

"BARK, TREACHEROUS VILLAIN!"

The lips so fondly pressed parted. Pale as a corpse, with trembling frame, the man tried to stand up, and gasped:

"Mrs. Raymond—my wife! you here!"

She had drawn a pistol, and for answer she fired, and he fell mortally wounded.

"I had the misfortune to lose him last year, my dear Captain."

"Call me Commandant one grade and more gray hairs since I was a huzzar. Still, you give me bad news, for he was a worthy man, whom I loved. Then you no longer dwell in Brittany?"

"Not the year round, as I was telling Madame Valdeieu when you arrived."

This change was evidently intended to bring the conversation back to the slippery ground of actualities, and it suited everybody.

The Vicomte was anxious to ascertain the Commandant's standing in the villa; Jeanne, troubled by unexpected reminiscences, desired to revert to the subject dearest to her; while Gontran felt the necessity for extricating himself out of an equivocal situation.

"Madame is an old-time friend of mine," he said, "and I am glad, dear Andre, that she is to be yours."

The word "friend" cut short Jeanne's project for palming relationship upon the soldier, belonging, as he did, to one of the richest Breton families, and Madame De Lorriz comprehended as much.

"I have not the honor of being the Vicomte d'Elven's friend," she said, with a forced smile, "seeing him to-night for the first time; but, since you are acquainted, I will tell you that the gentleman has met with my daughter, whom you have not seen since her earliest infancy."

"To whom you are going to introduce me?" interrupted the Commandant. "I made the journey here expressly for that purpose."

Jeanne thanked Gontran with a glance for coming to her relief, and then went on to explain the manner of the Vicomte's acquaintance with her daughter.

"My dear Andre, where do you lodge in Paris?" inquired the Commandant.

"Rue and Hotel Hilder."

"And I am at the Grand Hotel. Come and breakfast with me to-morrow at noon."

"With great pleasure."

"Then it is arranged. We will talk over all matters interesting to us."

Andre understood that in inviting him for the morrow Gontran desired propriety of his taking his leave, and he was preparing to depart when Therese appeared in the porch.

"Tea is served, mamma!" said she, bounding into the avenue.

"You see I am not alone," said Madame De Lorriz. "Here is one of my oldest and best of friends, the Commandant d'Arbois, whom you do not recognize because he started for the war in Africa when you were in the cradle."

"Excuse me, mamma," said Therese, "I only developed much later," replied the girl laughingly. "Still I never heard mamma speak of you."

Madame De Lorriz bit her lip as she stumbled over one of those stones inscribed to white-lying.

"Do you love music, sir?" inquired Therese of the Vicomte. "I am sure you sing."

"Badly, mademoiselle."

"I imagined the contrary, and would like to hear you."

Jeanne and Gontran simultaneously thought that, while Therese and Andre were engaged at the piano, they might converse in seclusion.

"Do not deny it, dear Andre," said the Commandant. "I have often heard your fine tenor voice singing Breton songs, the words of which I never could understand."

"Oh, I am ashamed, mamma," said Therese, clapping her hands, "a Breton song! I pray you, sir, to delight me with one."

As Gontran and Jeanne joined in seconding the girl's request, it was impossible for the Vicomte to refuse, and the entire party adjourned to the parlor.

The young lady seated herself at the piano to accompany Andre as he sang, while Gontran assumed a position on a lounge in the distance. The instrument where he and Jeanne could converse without disturbing the players.

Madame De Lorriz, upon the arrival of a propitious moment, excused herself to join her friend, and the Vicomte, thinking to interchange notes with Therese during this impromptu concert, attacked the air of a Breton song upon a well selected diapason, low enough for him to catch Therese's remarks and loud enough to prevent those words from reaching the ears of her mother. The difficulty lay in repeating, as it is difficult to sing and talk at the same time, but the Vicomte counted upon pauses and the intermission between couplets.

"My dear Jeanne," said Gontran as Madame De Lorriz seated herself upon the lounge, "I have received the letter from London, and the information is reliable, as my friend is an officer in the Guards, and well acquainted with the nobility. Alice d'Arbois had no other relative than a remote cousin, who had desired to marry her, but who disappeared several years ago. He is named William Atkins, and is a very hard case, having been compelled to expatriate himself on account of raceality, while leaving in London enormous debts. He is supposed to have gone to Australia, and by some he is claimed to be dead, as no news has been received from him since his departure. He also should be living, could contest the will, and he is not aware of its existence."

"His cousin had a perfect right to disinherit him, and my English friend consulted two solicitors, who informed him that Therese will have no difficulty in the inheritance. He has undertaken the trouble to notify the banking-house, who are ready to pay the money there upon deposit."

"I am not a little relieved, and there is nothing to fear. A nephew has succeeded to the title and estates of Lord Cairness, upon whose declaration the certificate of death has been issued, and Alice Avor has been buried in Scotland."

"The business is settled, and your daughter will have her millions. You will administer until she marries, and I congratulate anyone marrying her, as she is beautiful in face and in mind."

"George has spoken to me heretofore of this William Atkins," murmured Jeannette. "He held him in horror."

"Which proves that the guardsman has told the truth about the rascal."

"Should he reappear? I am not as well assured of his absence as you are."

Jeanne had good reasons for her suspicions, as she imagined that he would be the assassin of Lady Cairness, the fact of whose murder being unknown to Gontran.

"I have forgotten to tell you," resumed the Commandant, "that I was not compelled to interfere, as Lord Cairness was informed by an anonymous letter as to his aunt's being at the Morgue. The writer might have been William Atkins, who may be in Paris instead of Australia. This mystery I must still leave to fate, for he is powerless against you or your daughter, as the will is good."

"He may kill her, as he threatened me to do."

While Gontran was demonstrating the futility of threats, the Breton song finished and Andre profited by the opportunity.

"I thank you for not suspecting me," he said to Therese. "Your mother will cease to doubt when I am better known to her, and I shall have the fortune to be her son-in-law."

"I know it, and I would know whether—quick! another Breton song, and afterwards you can answer, as you must reflect. I wish to know whether you really love me."

"I swear that —"

"You answer too soon. Commence another song and I will accompany you."

At this time as Jeanne had observed their actions. But Andre struck off into a charming melody, which translated to the mother, who again bestowed her attention upon Gontran as he said:

"The subject appears to me exhausted; let us pass to something equally interesting. You have asked my opinion as to this young man and his motives. Well, Andre d'Elven is a worthy fellow of a suitable age for your daughter, who will have the fortune he lacks. He seems to adore her, but unfortunately their marriage is impossible, for reasons you can imagine."

"Impossible! Why? Why refuse Therese's hand —"

"He has not asked it," interrupted Gontran. "Admit that he will ask it before making inquiries, which is improbable; you will grant it. Still your daughter's position must be explained."

"No! No! you aid me," murmured Jeanne timidly.

"You count upon my deceiving that young man? My little Jeanne, you are wrong. Did it relate to a stranger I could hold my tongue, but not to the son of an old friend, whose hospitality I have enjoyed. Andre will consult me and I must tell him the truth, for I cannot sacrifice my honor."

"Then to-morrow the Vicomte d'Elven will learn what I am. Poor Therese!"

"What? Therese? Andre is romantic and crazy after the girl, and may set at defiance social distinctions. It only remains in that case to learn whether Therese would consent to lead a chatainal's life in the heart of Brittany."

"Her existence here is no more gay. Moreover, I will never leave her."

"Suppose he makes your absence compulsory. Presume on the morrow he will ask me whether you would consent to see your daughter no more, or only in secret. I must know what answer to make."

Jeanne turned pale, and her eyes filled with tears.

"You will answer," she said with an effort, "that to secure Therese's happiness I would renounce her, even were I to die from sorrow."

"Oh! I hope the question will not be asked. Now, Jeanne, I think that you have ceased their singing."

"This was true, for the fourth song was finished. During the twenty minutes occupied in their execution the future of the their loves was decided. Jeanne arose and approached them. "Pardon me, madame," said the Viscount as he took his hat to leave, "for abusing your patience, but by this time your daughter must be cured of Breton melodies."

"No! no!" exclaimed Therese, "we will commence when you come again. You will come again?"

"We count upon that," interposed Madame De Lorris.

"Since you authorize me, madame, and the Commandant d'Arbois will answer for me."

"I would have been overjoyed," interrupted Gontran, "to have introduced you to Madame Valdein myself, and we will be delighted to see you often. To-morrow we will speak of your next visit."

"Thank you, Commandant," responded Andre, giving his hand a warm shake.

Jeanne tendered him hers, which he kissed after the ancient fashion with the ease and grace of a gentleman of the old school.

"Is he not a charming man?" exclaimed Therese, after the Viscount had left the parlor.

"He has all good qualities, and among them bravery," responded Gontran. "I saw him once attack an old wolf which had disconcerted a dozen dogs, and kill it with his hunting-knife."

"The villa has need of an energetic protector like him or you, my friend," said Jeanne. "Gudule assures me that suspicious persons are seen at night prowling around the garden-gate."

"That is not surprising in this region."

"I fear they have designs upon Therese, and that is why I will sleep here to-night."

"What!" inquired Gontran, "do you seriously dread a nocturnal attack?"

"Yes, I have not forgotten what you told me."

"Then you suppose that this Australian cousin —"

Warned by a glance from Jeanne, he stopped short.

"What Australian?" inquired Therese. "Have we relations in that country?"

"No, no. I alluded to an old story not interesting to you. Your mother is right in taking precautions, as the house is isolated and Paris is full of thieves. Now, my little girl, let us speak about yourself. You do not know me, and I have a strong desire to know you, as we are destined to see one another frequently. Now, do you wish us to be friends, to begin with?"

Therese desired nothing more ardently, as the frank and manly countenance of Gontran d'Arbois had made a strong and pleasing impression upon her. Consequently, she answered with vivacity, and a conversation commenced, to be prolonged to a late hour, to the evident satisfaction of all engaged in it.

MISS LIZZIE EVANS

first came prominently before the public at the Standard Theatre, in this city, about two years ago, playing Clip in "A Messenger from Jarvis Section" with E. McAlle's Combination. This was practically her dramatic debut, although she had had some little experience prior to that time as a star of a small company in Ohio. Her success as Clip, as well as Chubb in "Mayberry's Girl," was marked. Last Summer she appeared as Nell in "Cheek" and the Gamin in "Her Atone-ment," and was received with favor in Boston, Baltimore and other cities. During the regular season of 1882-3 she played the soubrette with Milton Noble. About the first of June last she started a week in Detroit in "Foggy's Ferry" and did well. She recently appeared in "Foggy's Ferry" and "Dewdrop" in Columbus, O., during a soldiers' reunion, and met with success. Miss Evans is now under engagement with Messrs. Havlin & Callahan to star in the last-named pieces, and is to appear in all the large cities of the country. She is young, ambitious, pretty and very petite, and bids fair to become a leading attraction in the field of soubrette stars.

THE HERO OF FORT WORTH.

HOW A MILD-MANNERED MAN FRIGHTENED A GROUP OF DESPERADOES.

The strangers emptied their glasses, called for more, and then, glancing malignantly around, they launched forth in furious abuse of Texas and Texans, their language being garbled with the profusion and ornamentation of profanity peculiar to the quiliest cattle-drover of those times. As they ceased, Dusenberry, having taken in the situation at a glance, arose and advanced towards the strangers. The Fort Worth men put up their pistols and sank back in breathless amazement as Dusenberry marched up to the table at which the strangers sat. His flashing eyes, his heaving breast, his five feet of towering form reduced the spectators to speechlessness. Even the strangers paused and seemed impressed.

"Gentlemen," said Dusenberry, diving into his trousers and bringing up an ancient silver watch, "you have wounded the finest feelings of my nature in your remarks about Texas, and you must retract them or—but never mind. I will give you five minutes to retract in. Five minutes to secure your safe return to home and friends. Five minutes to avoid a grave upon the lonesome plain. Five minutes!"

An awful silence fell upon the crowd. The blood curdled in the veins of every Fort Worthian present. What! Had they been treating this fire-eating terror with scarcely-veiled contempt? Had they been absolutely courting death for years? But just then one of the strangers recovered his power of speech and said:

"Why, stranger, if you feel that way about it, of course we'll cut it short. We didn't mean it if you or any of your friends, but was just talking on loose like."

And with that they all four got up and slunk out, their six-shooters flopping feebly against their hips, and their very spurs looking drooped and weedy as they went. With the closing of the door Dusenberry's eye reeled in its socket. The excitement which had thus far held him up gave way, and he collapsed, a flabby little heap upon the floor. The assembled citizens crowded round him, eager to offer attention to the hero of the hour, and at last he was rehabilitated sufficiently to admit of his being sent home in charge of a special and confidential friend.

"Why, Doozey, my boy, you took us all by surprise. We never thought you were a fighter."

"Didn't you?"

"No. Why, don't you know that those are four of the worst men in the cattle business? And we expected every minute to see them go to shooting. Were you armed?"

"Well, I had a pistol for show, but I don't believe it was loaded, and I couldn't have fired it, anyhow."

"Great Heavens, man, suppose they had refused to retract, what on earth would you have done?"

Dusenberry stopped, looked all around to see if anyone was passing, pulled his friend's ear close down to his lips, and whispered:

"I'd have extended the time."—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

THE TRAVELED LADY.

WONDERFUL IMPROVEMENT IN THE ART OF RAILROADING.

A jaunt over a railway is often as good as a trip to the min-strels. Last week we took a spin over the Michigan Central, and during our waking moments were highly edified, amused and instructed by the tone and conversation of two ladies in the most first-class coach, across the aisle and about the bin-nacle. The variety of their intelligence and a vast fund of general information attracted our attention, and we just sat there and drank it all in, like cold truth from a living spring.

"Do you suppose they have air-brakes on this train?" inquired the one next the window, with a bronze green plume in her hat.

"Oh, yes, they run 'em now on all trains."

"What are they for?"

"Oh, they are to ventilate the car and give 'em more fresh air. I heard they intended to put 'em on cattle-cars, so the poor animals could get plenty of oxygen."

"Indeed! This is a wonderful age. Did you ever ride in a chair-car?"

"Oh, yes; they are just the nicest kind of cars. Some of 'em are real easy, to have rockers on 'em. But I like a sleeper the best."

"Yes, they are more homelike and comfortable. If any accident happens they unhook the sleeper and leave it at the last station."

"Why, my! How nice!"

"Yes, and the sleeper is much more comfortable to ride in because it don't go as fast as the rest of the train."

"It don't?"

"Oh, no; Charles says the Pullman Company won't allow the railroads to haul the sleepers near so fast as the balance of the cars."

"Why, how strange!"

"Yes, very."

"What do you suppose makes the cars sway so, back and forth?"

"Oh, I heard the railroad company had been experimenting lately with rockers on the cars. It's something to do with concussion and retraction of the expansive compression, or something of that kind."

"What a wonderful age!"

"It is really. And these accident insurance companies are a great improvement over the old style of traveling. Charles says all first-class roads carry them nowdays, and it makes one so much more secure to know that they are on the same train with one of them. They are worked by electricity, and must cost awful high; don't you think so?"

"Yes, they must that." Cheek.—Baltimore Sun.

THE NEW YORK CLIPPER.

SATURDAY, AUGUST 25, 1883.

THE ROWING ON SENECA LAKE.

In a monetary sense, the regatta last week at Watkins was a success. In all other respects it was a failure. It was a failure most of all in the neglect of the railway authorities to take adequate steps for the accommodation of the public, and in the neglect of Courtney to take adequate steps to insure the public that spectacle the promise of which had placed them in the power of the railroad and hotel people. It is almost unnecessary to add that the spectacle that had been promised and that was altogether missed was a heat in which Hanlan and Courtney should be among the contestants. While Courtney might not have been able to get a place in the final heat by rowing, he could have got it by ceasing to row in earnest after it had become clear to him that Lee, as the partner of Hanlan ordinarily, and as having this time the special incentive of a fifty-dollar reward openly promised by Hanlan in case he (Lee) should shut Courtney out from any chance of competing in the final heat, was manoeuvring but for one purpose, which purpose was later made plain enough by Lee withdrawing from the final heat after he had in the first acquired the right to row in it by shutting Courtney out. Lee was in Courtney's water, not for the purpose of directly interfering with him, but undoubtedly with the view of irritating him and superinducing "weakening," and when the referee failed to caution the Newark sculler the representative of Union Springs should have insured himself against further hindrance by keeping to his own course and inviting a collision. We question that it was bodily fear, but it may be that Courtney feared the possible consequences of collision with a sculler whose purpose he for hours had had special reason to be in no doubt of. Even if he got a decision in his favor on the question of foul, he might still have been unable to row in the final heat. He cannot swim, and a wrestle in shells between him and Lee, catch-as-catch-can with spoon oars, was not desirable. The penalty for anything an oarsman may either intentionally or unwittingly do to another in any possible scrimmage is no greater than Lee would have incurred had he simply been touched by Courtney in the latter's own water, without doing that oarsman or his shell any injury. It may be further argued that if Courtney had invited a foul it would have been telegraphed to the press all over the country: "Courtney at his old tricks again!" That was precisely what was telegraphed as it was. It was either Scylla or Charybdis. The Union Springs sculler was certain to get the blame, no matter what happened, so long as the happening was something the public had not looked for. Courtney may expect always to get the worst of it, so far as the telegraph can give it to a man. "Nothing succeeds like success," and, while as an amateur the Union Springs sculler earned more than fair fame, as a professional oarsman he has undeniably proved a failure. There will be one more chance for him, and that will be at Saratoga. He may expect to find a combination against him there, and he will be "pocketed" on the trotting-track principle, if the opportunity again presents. He can surely avoid it only by being prompt to get away and by rowing so fast that no one save possibly Hanlan can get near him. If he cannot do both, he may as well retire finally. For him to invite a foul for which he himself is wholly blameless would be to justify himself in the eyes of professionals, but it would be surely to condemn him in the eyes of the remainder of mankind, who are apt to accept first reports and to stick to them even after the slower and juster mail has brought contradiction. It is of no utility that in practice spins he has pulled a boat faster on Cayuga Lake than anybody else has ever pulled one anywhere. It is practically of no weight that, as is claimed, he not only did this years ago, but has also done it every year since, inclusive of 1883 even. If he has really shown this form this year—and the men who have timed him are not fools, and have done so for the purpose of risking their money on him—it shows that, notwithstanding that age is beginning to crowd him, he has improved as a sculler in the abstract. But that is all that it does show. It does not prove that he can beat anybody who is a first-class oarsman, or yet a second-rate. He has practically been inactive for three or four years, and meanwhile Hanlan has been busy and victorious. While Courtney has been rowing on Cayuga Lake against his own shadow, Hanlan and others have been pulling everywhere against flesh-and-blood. The one at best has triumphed over a watch; the other has forced man after man to succumb. When Courtney gets alongside of an earnest blood-and-bone competitor, the situation must now be so new and strange to him that he cannot have the stroke that is so free and powerful when he is rowing alone, or virtually alone; and thus any good sculler who cannot ordinarily pull a mile within a half-dozen seconds of as fast time as Courtney can is liable to beat him. When the antagonist of Courtney is Hanlan, the prestige of the latter's almost uniform successes during an active professional career of three or four years passed by the Union Springs sculler in practical idleness comparatively should exercise a moral effect upon the latter sufficient to hold him back at least an additional four or five seconds to the mile. It would be better for Courtney if he did not row so fast on Cayuga Lake, and better for the public if they should not hear of his time in private, no matter how fast he may row there. It is astonishing that there should be any reluctance on the part of other oarsmen to make a match with him. It is not creditable to them that they seem content to confine their efforts to barring him out from regattas or to "pocketing" him after he has got in. Any chance that he offers any one of them for a match should be jumped at, for he has the worst of it in consequence of his years of practical inaction. Perhaps the reason the others have not individually pointed shell for him is that they prefer the certainties of regattas to the risks of a match. Events have so shaped themselves of late that Courtney may at any time expect to have hard water to row through. Saratoga we regard as Courtney's last chance, and we do not think very highly of Saratoga should there be enough starters to render trial-heats indispensable.

MITCHELL AND SLADE.

As was to have been expected, obstacles are to be thrown in the way of a meeting between these notabilities. In view of the reports of sanguinary conflicts that so often come from Missouri and Kansas, it will surprise many to learn that the laws of those States prohibit boxing with naked fists. Indian Territory is accessible to the pugilists, or at least it might be, and there is no direct law there against prize-fighting; but Messrs. Slade and Mitchell are not American citizens, and there is a law that prevents any foreigner from risking the loss of his scalp by venturing among the savages without a passport from some functionary of the Interior Department. When men go so far off to settle a little dispute as Mitchell and Slade have done, it seems like persecution for people to take the trouble to unearth these restrictive statutes. Fortunately, if Mitchell and Slade cannot fight anywhere in this country, they are where it will not take them long to get out of it. But have foreigners no rights that Americans are bound to respect, and is this no longer "the land of the free and the home of the brave?"

YOUNGSTERS ON AND OFF THE TURF.

Had the owner of the little brown trotter with the odd name obeyed the promptings of his judgment, instead of yielding to the temptation put before him by the managers of the Rochester Driving-park in the shape of a handsome purse to induce Jay-Eye-See to attempt to beat his Cleveland time of 2:15½, the thousands that attended the Rochester meeting on Aug. 16 would not now have it to say that they saw a five-year-old trot in 2:14. It was a remarkable performance, and justifies the belief that, unless the horse is unwisely brought forward in too many competitions of this kind while he is yet in course of development physically, he will for many years to come stand foremost among exhibition-trotters. His going in 2:14 when five years old is a reminder of the day on which that time was first made. It was at Mystic Park, Boston, in September of 1874, and Goldsmith Maid was the maker. There was a running-horse at her wheel, however. The glorious career of this long and low mare was then drawing towards its close, for she was seventeen years old; and 2:14 remains her best record. During her public life, which was one of splendid activity, she lowered the best record of the King of the Turf, who was her immediate predecessor, by three and three-quarter seconds, Dexter himself having surpassed Flora Temple's record by two and a half seconds. Goldsmith Maid had started in a way calculated to give her a long career of great usefulness. She was at least eight years old before she had trotted in 2:35, although she had then been in harness about three years. A result of not forcing her in her youth was that when at last she was well developed and in good hands she beat time very fast, cutting it down from 1869 to 1874 from 2:35 to 2:14. There were theorists among trainers who as far back as 1870 held that trotters could be trained to go in 2:30 at three years old, and in 2:20 at five; but no stable had ever produced such an animal. Rival trainers held to the idea that, if such could be produced, he would not last. Both the three-year-old and the five-year-old time has within the past four or five years been reduced far below those figures and in Bay Frank California boasts of a green horse that is said to have gone in private in 2:09½; but it yet remains to be proven that the horses who show phenomenal speed at those ages will hold their own for years as Flora Temple and Goldsmith Maid held theirs, and as Dexter would also have held his in all probability had he not been retired from the turf when in the fullness of his power. It is perhaps not necessary that they should. No first-class trotter of to-day does a tithe of the work that Flora or the Maid was required to do. The tracks now are easier and faster, and exhibitions have taken the place of match-races, as well as of purses competed for horse against horse. The leading trotters of to-day are in one respect like the human champions of some other sports, who, challenged to a competition, row, run or play when they please, where they please, and as they please. Sometimes they will not row, run or play at all; but the championship goes on all the same, the title having at least the merit of possessing a commercial value in connection with exhibitions.

But while Jay-Eye-See has done great things for one of his age, and is still on the turf, the son of Longfellow and of Semper Felix, who was a wonder among runners, has been forced into retirement. Leonatus is off the turf, and the probability is that he will never reappear. Unbeaten as a three-year-old, he retires as a three-year-old, and will probably go to the stud. If he does, he will be one of very few horses that have been notably victorious being put to that use so early an age. A great loss to his owners as a racer, he is a greater loss to the American turf of to-day, whatever he may be able to indirectly contribute to it later through his progeny.

RECORD-BUILDERS.

It might surprise some of the managers of baseball clubs could they get at the inside of the professional players' work and see how many batmen have this season sacrificed the interests of their club by efforts to play for an individual record. The rules of baseball are to blame, and so is the system of press-reporting. The former gives official prominence to the records of total base-hits and ignores sacrifice-hits. The reporters, as a general rule, see nothing worthy of special praise aside from "two-baggers," "three-baggers" and "home-runs." The custom of singling out for publication the names of batsmen who make these hits and runs is responsible for their striving more for this sort of glory than for the best interests of the club they represent. Alike in the field and at the bat, a man may do the most effective work in that branch of baseball technically called "sacrifice-play," and yet not receive a word of credit for it at the hands of many of the reporters. Only let him get in a home-run, even though it be off the weakest kind of pitching, and down will go his name in the score, and laudatory press-reports will follow. All this is a hindrance to the policy of "playing for the side," which is the great essential of success, and the only way for players to render a club the most effective service. Were the recording of two and three base-hits and home-runs abandoned as a feature of scoring, and the recording of sacrifice-hits and other points of play incidental to earnest and honest co-operative work substituted, there would be much less of "playing for a record," regardless of the club as a unit, than there now is. The publishing of weekly and monthly averages at the bat also tends strongly to induce the batsmen to go for individual records; and it is pertinent to remark just here that the season's averages as far as published exhibit very plainly the utter uselessness of attempting to estimate a player's value to his team by the figures of his batting-averages. The record of the averages of the American Association thus far published—and these averages, by the way, should not be made up until the close of the season—show that the batsmen who lead in this respect are, in a majority of cases, members of clubs who are far in the rear in the race for the pennant. The seeming great achievements of the record-builders in individual and isolated cases has not advanced their clubs at all.

RACING BY STEAM.

The passage by the ocean steamship Alaska last week, the time of which is unofficially given as six days and eighteen hours, would be regarded as wonderful, were it not that the untired new Oregon is expected to surpass it as soon as her machinery gets down to its bearings. Much as it is to be deprecated, racing by ocean-steamships promises to come again into vogue. Meanwhile, there is a prospect of a race in which there will be no risk at all to the lives of passengers. The builders of the Yosemite and the Atalanta, called by courtesy steam yachts, although they are almost as large as ocean steamers used to be, are represented as anxious to test the speed of the two vessels named. It is claimed for the Atalanta that she can cover eighteen knots an hour, and John Roach, the builder of the Yosemite, is said to have proposed to race her against Jay Gould's craft from Sandy Hook to Cape May, the winner to take the other vessel as the prize. This proposition is understood as having been made to the Messrs. Cramp of Philadelphia, who built the Atalanta. Should it be accepted, the match will create a general interest such as has not been manifested in steaming in these waters since the old Oregon and the C. Vanderbilt had their race, which was so hot that on the return down the Hudson River the latter had to make fuel of her joinder-work.

NATURAL CHESS-PLAYERS.

The disproportionate number of Jews engaged in the recent chess tournaments in Europe could not have escaped attention. Of the fourteen competitors in the main tournament, no fewer than six are Jews. Zukertort, Steinitz, Englisch and Rosenthal were respectively awarded first, second, fifth and special prizes; and thus representatives of the Jewish race commanded one-half of the total number of prizes in the first class. In view of their success, the claim has been made that the Jews as a race possess a special mental fitness for chess-playing, and the assertion follows that from the times of the Talmud Jews have been pre-eminent at games similar to chess. To echo The Jewish Chronicle, "the mathematical bent of mind, the patience, perseverance and daring, and the peculiar quality known as long-headedness are all properties of the Jewish nature, which are equally valuable for business and for chess." Other nationalities could possess all these qualities in a notable degree, and still not make them manifest at the chess-table. This could come about through the possessors of those qualities holding aloof from the chess-table. All the qualities named are called for in combination at games wholly unlike chess, and at these Jews are conspicuously inconspicuous. Chess suits them, just as, and possibly for the same reason, going a-fishing suits many other individuals who have the leisure that springs alike from an abundance of money and from the lack of much of it. Fishing is a long game, and so is chess. Both are too long for most people. Anybody who has ever kept a public chess-house in this city, for example, can tell better than any mere theorizing can, why certain portions of the community incline to chess. Long-headedness is frequently at the bottom of it, but it is not the long-headedness that can see a check in prospective any sooner than the average of individuals. Probably, in proportion to their numbers, the Jews can furnish more chess-players than almost any other nationality; and if in the European tournament the Jews outnumbered any other nationality by three to one, their winning one-half the prizes was not a surprising feat, although a creditable one. Locality and circumstance have quite as much to do with shaping human mentality as nature; and a Jew reared in Europe might well achieve victories at chess that if reared in America and still retaining any predilection for chess that nature may have given him at birth, he would signally have failed to achieve had he entered into this European tournament. Americans can undoubtedly "paralyze" Jews in playing draw-poker; but we do not believe that they are born poker-players. It is a short, quick game, more in accord with their business habits and every-day life than chess, and from choice they have educated themselves in it, as Jews have in chess. It is so with all other games not in a notable degree dependent upon physique. It is practice alone that makes perfect. Now and again we find of two men that one outstrips the other, and of the former we are apt to say that he has a genius for that particular game, thus implying that he was born to play it; but he would also have become eminent at some other game that struck his fancy, for his genius is nothing else than a capacity for closer application than the other possesses; and yet as a child he may have lacked close application for anything. We also once in a while find in two men with apparently an equal passion and an equal application for a game that one outstrips the other. Then it is not nature at work so much as circumstance. One man has had better opportunities for practice than the other—has been more fortunate in finding skilled opponents, let us say. There are many expert chess-players scattered over the world in obscure places who would be immeasurably better players if they were brought into a large city like this, and keyed up constantly by sharp competition with one another and with others more accustomed to sharp competition. It is so in other games not dominated by physique, and it is so in some that are. There is no reason that it should not be so in chess, unless playing that game is mainly a matter of genial inspiration, which few practical minds are willing to accept as the truth. Jews have unquestionably the faculty of application; and hence, while denying that Zukertort, Steinitz, Englisch and Rosenthal were made for chess-players, because they were born Jews, we believe that they would have made their mark at almost anything they were likely to turn their attention to, provided that they had been reared and educated as Jews.

A LANDMARK FOR YACHTSMEN.

It has always been more or less a matter of doubt where Long Island Sound begins at this end. For the purpose of advertising "a delightful sail in Long Island Sound," the captains of excursion steamboats have almost from time immemorial made it anywhere between Port Morris and New Rochelle. The yachtsmen's Sound has usually begun at this end just east of Riker's Island, and thus has included Flushing and Whitestone Bays, their races "through Long Island Sound" seldom extending any farther east than City Island or the Stepping Stones, opposite Great Neck. Among those whose business it has been to navigate Long Island Sound from end to end, its western extremity has heretofore almost generally been located at Sands Point, where the water widens between Glen Cove on the Long Island side and New Rochelle on the Westchester shore. This was the western beginning of the Sound in the eyes of the true waterman, whether he captained a steamboat, was skipper of a sloop, or simply raked for oysters. There, too, the Hell Gate pilots were supposed to assume control of sailing vessels, and there deep water begins alongside of Execution Light, which stands nearly midway between Sands Point and New Rochelle. There were some who thought that the beginning should be at Throgg's Neck, because there, and at Willett's Point, opposite, the Government has erected fortifications on both sides of a very narrow strait; but those who so thought were denounced as landlubbers by the true waterman. The landlubbers have now the better of the argument. The inspectors of navigation here have at last deemed the vexed question sufficiently weighty to seek for an authoritative decision, and the Chief of the United States Coast Survey has just decided in effect that it is not the East River that runs along by City and David's Islands up to Sands Point. The East River, he declares, has its eastern terminus at Throgg's Neck and Willett's Point, and consequently the fortifications there mark the western beginning of Long Island Sound. This settles it. Our Little Neck claims come from Long Island Sound, and our East-river oysters are not East-rivers. The yachtsmen who poke their noses just up to the buoy off Throgg's Neck can no longer claim that they have been racing in the dangerous waters of Long Island Sound, when they have barely gone outside of the quiet and safe haven of Whitestone Bay; and hereafter we shall all know where we are when a steamboat captain has advertised to take us on a moonlight excursion through the Sound. An important question, which should have been settled fifty years ago, is disposed of at last.

QUESTIONS THAT DO NOT REACH THIS OFFICE UNTIL TUESDAY MORNING WILL NOT BE ANSWERED UNTIL THE FOLLOWING WEEK.

ALLEGHENY vs. ECLIPSE.

The Eclipse again defeated the Allegheny Aug. 17 in Pittsburgh, Pa., after a game creditable to neither side. Errors by Mansell, Batin and Morgan gave the visitors six runs and a long lead at the outset. The home-team made a good up-hill fight, but failed to overcome their opponents' lead. Gerhardt and Mack led for their respective clubs, both in batting and fielding. Score:

The Eclipse Club defeated the Allegheny Aug. 18, before about one thousand spectators. The home-team could do nothing with Weaver, making only four scattering safe hits off his pitching, while the visitors had no trouble in batting Neagle. The few errors of the Allegheny were very costly.

The Eclipse had no trouble in beating the Allegheny Aug. 20, when the visitors were credited with their ninth successive victory over the home-team. The first and third innings virtually decided the contest in favor of the visitors, who then scored seven runs. The final figures stood 8 to 2 in favor of the Eclipse. After the game Taylor, Mansell and Creamer of the Allegheny were indefinitely suspended and fined $100 each on account of alleged drunkenness.

METROPOLITAN vs. CINCINNATI.

The tenth game of the series between these clubs took place on Aug. 18 at the Polo Grounds, and as it was ladies' day nearly three thousand people were present, including about fifty ladies, who occupied seats in the grand-stand. As before, the contest was exceedingly close and exciting, and it was not until the fourth inning that the first run was scored. In this inning Reilly led off with a hit to right-field. He tried to make two bases on it, but Roseman sent the ball to second, and Nelson touched the runner off the base. Reilly was about to start for the players' bench when Umpire Walsh called "No out." This decision in a measure demoralized the home-team, and when Carpenter hit to Nelson the latter threw the ball to third base in time to head off Long John, but Esterbrook muffed it. Carpenter started for second base when the next ball was pitched, and Reischlager sent the sphere whizzing down to the second bag. At the same time Reilly started for the home-plate, and Crane, in his endeavors to get the ball there, threw wildly. Snyder struck out, and both Reilly and Carpenter tallied. Snyder struck out, and Sommer made a hit, Fulmer struck out, and McPhee ended the inning by flying out to O'Rourke. This advantage was offset in the fifth inning, when the Mets got in three unearned runs. Esterbrook reached first by Carpenter's fumble, and was forced out at second by Kennedy. The latter started for second base, but while running made a good throw to McPhee, who failed to touch Kennedy. After this Reischlager's sacrifice sent Kennedy to third base. Lynch then followed with a two-bagger, sending in Kennedy. Lynch scored on Crane's single to left field. The latter went to second base while the ball was being fielded to the home-plate in trying to catch Lynch. Nelson came next and knocked a difficult ball to right-field. Corkhill was playing away out, and Reilly started for it, but while running with the ball he muffed it, and Crane cleared the circuit and scored what proved to be the winning run. O'Rourke was the third man captured, flying out to Reilly. Neither side added to their score after this, both playing finely, so the contest ended with a victory for the home-team. Score:

The eleventh game between these clubs was played at the Polo Grounds on Aug. 20 before about twelve hundred people, and this time the visitors made the mistake of substituting Deagle and Trafley for White and Snyder, the result being disastrous, as the home-team won the game in their own hands after the second inning, when the score stood 6 to 0 in their favor. The only hope of getting one run out of the four was in keeping White and Snyder in their positions, this "battery" being the most effective the Mets have faced this season. After White's pitching, that of Deagle was simply "pie" for the Metropolitan batsmen, as the appended score shows. After the second inning the Mets took things easy.

The ninth game between the above-named clubs was played Aug. 18 in Providence, R. I., and was poorly attended. The home-team took a winning lead in the first inning, when nine safe hits, including a three-bagger by Hines, yielded seven runs, six earned. Coleman was also hit hard in every inning after that, but fine fielding prevented the scoring of more than two additional runs. The Philadelphia pounded Radburn freely in only two innings, six safe hits, including one by Furlow over the left-field fence for four bases, then sending in four runs. Score:

OBITUARY.

Edward G. Saltman, who died Aug. 14 in Brooklyn, was in his early days very prominent in baseball circles, both in this city and in Boston, Mass. He was born about fifty-three years ago in Jefferson County, N. Y., and when a youth went to school in Hoboken, N. J., where in his spare moments he gained his first practical experience in baseball. In 1862 he joined the Gotham Club, which then played at the old Red-house grounds, in the vicinity of Second avenue and 106th street. He guarded second base for the Gothams for five successive seasons, and was credited with both in fielding and batting in the early games played by that once well-known organization, including the one on June 30, 1864, when sixteen innings were played before the requisite twenty-one runs were made by the winners. In 1867 he removed to Boston, where he organized the Triumphant Club, the pioneer of the national game in New England. He instructed its members how to play the New York game (as it was then called) of baseball. He took an active part in all of the match-games of the Tri-mountains up to 1865, occupying at various times the positions of pitcher, catcher and second base. In 1865 he took up his residence in Savannah, Ga., where he organized and was president of a club appropriately named the Pioneer. In 1867 he returned to Boston, where until recently he resided. His funeral took place Aug. 16 from the residence of his sister, 147 Hart street, Brooklyn.

ATHLETIC vs. COLUMBUS.

The Athletics added another to their long list of victories Aug. 18 by badly beating the Columbus Club in the presence of eight thousand people. The home-team gave a remarkable exhibition of batting, especially in the eighth inning, when eight safe hits, including three-baggers by Stovey and Moynahan and two-baggers by Birchall and Corey, sent in eight runs. Stovey, Corey and Birchall excelled in batting for the Athletics while Moynahan and Richmond did the heavy hitting for the visitors, Moynahan again hitting the ball over the left-field fence for a home-run. Mann made a remarkable running catch.

The Athletics were again victorious Aug. 20, outplaying the Columbus nine both at the bat and in the field. The visitors introduced their new left-handed pitcher, Fries, but he did not prove effective, and his delivery was very wild, sending five men to their bases on balls, three in the first inning. The home-team took the lead at the outset, and held it throughout.

Mann fielded splendidly, and Corey made a remarkable lefthanded stop. The two thousand spectators present gave most of their attention to the telegraphic reports of the games in other cities. The score was:

BOSTON vs. NEW YORK.

The above-named clubs met for the ninth time Aug. 18 in Boston, Mass., the New Yorks then being credited with their sixth victory of the series. Buffinton was batted freely by the visitors, while Welch puzzled the home team. Hines broke a finger in the third inning, and gave way to Hackett. The Bostonians scored their two runs on a base on balls given Sutton, a safe hit by Whitney, and an error by Troy and Clapp. The New Yorks bunched six safe hits in the first three innings, and, aided by a poor throw by Hines and a fumble by Radford, scored four runs. This gave the visitors a lead, which the Bostonians could not overcome. Caskins' batting and fielding were the chief features. Score:

THE GAME IN RICHMOND.—Three thousand people assembled at Baseball Park, Richmond, Va., Aug. 14, when the Virginians had as opponents the St. Louis Club. The home-team was easily defeated by superior batting and base-running. Dolan's catching was the chief feature. Score, 7 to 4, on the following terms:

The home-team failed to bat either Mullane or McGinnis, while both Ferguson and Nash were knocked all over the field. The home-team worked hard, but could not overcome the lead of the visitors, and the game finished with a score of 13 to 5. A large crowd assembled Aug. 18 to witness the first game between the Trentons and the Virginians. The visitors scored three runs on errors in the first inning, which the Virginians tied in the first and fourth, and both added to their score to the end of the ninth inning, a tenth being necessary, when the visitors, by a magnificent rally at the bat, scored four runs, while the home-team failed to score in their half. Morgan's catching and Schaaf's short-stopping were the fielding features. Score, 7 to 3.

UNITED STATES vs. CANADA.

The annual international match between representative eleven of the United States and Canada was played Aug. 15 and 16 in Toronto, Ont., and ended, like its predecessors for so many years, in an overwhelming victory for the Americans, a result, however, on this occasion as gratifying as it was unexpected. The winners were not only native-born amateurs, but all save one were from Philadelphia, and the contest was therefore practically that of a single American city against all Canada. The Canadian team was selected with great care, being pronounced the best eleven ever got together in the Dominion, and the ease with which it was defeated attests once more the great superiority of Philadelphia, the cricketing centre of the New World. The weather was delightful on the opening day, when the attendance was large. Law of the Milled Club, Philadelphia, and Ray of the White City, captained the respective sides. The Canadian team won the toss and went first to the bat on a passable wicket. The effective bowling and splendid fielding of the Americans rendered the getting of runs a very difficult operation. The first five wickets fell for 29 runs, and the entire side was disposed of for a total of 43, in compiling which three hours were spent. Ogden with 12 and Morphy with 9 alone made any stand, and were the chief contributors to the meagre total. MacNutt of the Young Americans proved to be the most destructive bowler, with the remarkable record of five wickets for only ten runs. The Americans in their only inning put together the very creditable total of 148 against good bowling and fine fielding, except towards the finish, when considerable loose play was indulged in. John Thayer batted brilliantly for 29, and his efforts were seconded by Lowry, Law, Wister and Caldwell, with their respective scores of 25, 23, 22, and 20 runs, and 15. Lowry and Wister, the last men added 50 runs by very free hitting, in half an hour to the score before they were separated. Brewster and the Bostonian Hubbard were the unfortunate men, the former being bowled off his pad the first ball sent him. The second inning of the Canadians was also a very brief one, it ending for 56 runs, Boyd with 14 and Simpson with 11, not out, being the principal scorers. Lowry's left-handed slow captured five wickets at a cost of but 25 runs. The match thus ended in a victory for the United States eleven in one inning with 49 runs to spare. The score:

BASEBALL.

AL. G. PRATT,

METROPOLITAN vs. CINCINNATI.

The eighth game of the championship series between these clubs was played at the Polo Grounds Aug. 16 before a decidedly small assemblage of spectators on account of the threatening weather, and the uncertainty as to the ground being in its condition. The contest began with the Cincinnati at the bat, and their first three men were easily thrown out. On the other side, however, Nelson led off with a good hit, and after O'Rourke had been finely pitched out by White, Bradley hit safely to right-field, sending Nelson to third. Roseman then hit a ball to Fulmer, who failed to accept a chance to double up Brady and the striker, and on left error Nelson scored. On Esterbrook's hit to Carpenter the latter put out Brady and came near making a double-play; but Holbert hit to White, and that ended the inning. In the second inning Snyder led off with what would have been a two-base hit had he not slipped and fallen on his way to second, on his having ample time to get back to first base. On Sommer's hit to Nelson Snyder was forced off. Sommer getting his base, Fulmer by a good sacrifice hit sent Sommer to second, and on McPhee's two-base hit a run was scored and the inning closed with a tie-score. Neither side counted after this until the fifth inning, and that proved to be the turning-point in the game. In the third, after two men were out, Jones spoiled a three-base hit of Brady's by a splendid running-catch, which elicited hearty applause from the grand-stand assemblage. In the fifth Kennedy was kindly given a life by his "old pard," John Reilly, but it did not prove costly, as on Crane's hit to McPhee there was a doubling-up process which disposed of both Kennedy and Crane. Then Keefe hit safely, and by the aid of called balls three men were placed on the bases. Just at this time Brady hit a high ball to right-field, which Macular could easily have caught; but Reilly was anxious to wipe out that previous error of his with a brilliant catch, and so he went for the ball and dropped it, and the error gave the Mets two runs and the game, as it turned out. John evidently felt very badly over it. From this time out the Cincinnati had a hard uphill piece of work cut out for them, and they failed to accomplish the task. In the last four innings they only scored a couple of base-hits off Keefe's pitching. Indeed, what with his pitching and his splendid fielding in his position, Keefe carried off the honors of the game. The score: White pitched with telling effect, too, after the first inning, and the bases he gave on balls would not have proved costly had Reilly not gone after that ball of Macular's. In the field, however, the home-team bore off the palm, as the errors of Fulmer and White gave the Mets the chance to score the runs they did. A fine double-play by Crane ended the game in the first part of the ninth inning, the Mets winning by 3 to 1 with an inning to spare. The score:

The game between these clubs Aug. 17 attracted an unusually large attendance, and was marked by a most exciting finish, the Metropolitans, after a gallant uphill fight, then managing to get in the winning run. The Cincinnati started off with a long lead, scoring a total of four runs in the second, third and fourth innings off seven safe hits, together with a base on balls and an error by Crane. Keefe then got down to work, and base hits by McPhee, Roseman and a tiring hit off him and failed to score an additional run. The Mets made their first run on a base on called balls, a wild throw by Snyder and a safe hit by O'Rourke in the sixth inning. Roseman led off in the following inning with a two-bagger, and crossed the home-plate on a wild throw by Fulmer after two men were out. The home-team took right hold of White's pitching in the eighth, safe hits by Crane, Nelson, O'Rourke and Roseman, aided by a muff by McPhee and a fumble by Jones, then sending three runs and the victory. Crane was put out in this inning by being hit by a batted ball, and O'Rourke was given a life at third base by a daring slide and a questionable decision thereon. The fielding feature was a difficult running-catch by Crane, on which he effected a double-play. Roseman did the best batting. Score:

BROOKLYN vs. ST. LOUIS.

The Staten Island Cricket Club's baseball nine, composed of college players and members of the New York Stock Exchange, visited Washington Park Aug. 14, and there played their third game with the Brooklyn professionals, the result being a close contest, which the professionals won by a score of 4 to 3 only. The first game was played May 17, and ended in a victory for Brooklyn by 9 to 5; the second took place June 15, and this was marked by a score of 3 to 2 being won by the professionals. It will be seen, therefore, that the amateurs improved in the play every match, although they faced stronger teams in each game they played. The amateurs were short the valuable services of Tyng, Walden and Tower on this last occasion, Odell, the Yale's Freshman nine's pitcher, playing in place of Tyng. The score:

The next day the Staten Island visited the Polo Grounds, and there played with the Metropolitan team, with the result of an easy victory for the professionals by 12 to 5, they scoring 7 runs in the first inning, which took all the interest out of the match.

METROPOLITAN vs. NEWARK.

The fourth game between the above-named clubs was played Aug. 14 at the Polo Grounds before a comparatively small assemblage. The home-team took the lead in the first inning and held it until the eighth, when the visitors got in five runs and placed themselves ahead. The Mets, however, tied the score in the ninth, and made the winning run in the tenth. O'Rourke made a home-run by one of the longest hits ever seen on the local grounds. The score was:

JOE QUERT, the well-known second-baseman, has been engaged by the St. Louis Club. He was formerly with the Chicago, and played during the early part of this season with the Detroit nine.

who was at one time a prominent professional pitcher, was born about thirty-three years ago in Pittsburg, Pa. His first experience in baseball was gained with amateur organizations in 1867, he then pitching for the Enterprise and Allegheny Clubs of Allegheny. The following season Pratt pitched for the Riverside Club of Portsmouth, O. He then accepted an engagement with the Forest City Club of Cleveland, remaining with that once well-known professional team for four successive seasons. As a pitcher he ranked with the best for command of ball and speed of delivery, and the many creditable victories achieved by the Forest City Club sufficiently evidence his effectiveness in that position. His name first came prominently before the public in connection with the game between the Forest City and Kekiongas Clubs played May 4, 1871, in Fort Wayne, Pratt and Bobby Mathews were the pitchers of the contending nines, and so effectively did each curve the ball that the figures at the finish stood 2 to 0 in favor of the Kekiongas, it being the smallest score ever made in a game up to that date. Pratt pitched and Jim White caught in a majority of the games played by the Forest City Club, Sutton, now of the Boston, guarding third base. When the Forest City Club disbanded, at the close of the season of 1872, Pratt returned to Pittsburg, where he has since resided, conducting for several years a baseball emporium, the headquarters of the fraternity of that city. During the last decade, Pratt has been a prominent figure in baseball matters in his native city, having inspired a majority of the professional games played there, and having creditably managed the Allegheny Club from the date of its reorganization, in the latter part of 1881, until last June, when he accepted the position of official umpire, tendered him by the American Association. His career as an umpire was a brief one, self-respect causing him to resign that onerous position rather than submit to the abuse and insults of partisan spectators and reporters. Pratt's honorable and straightforward conduct during his lengthy connection with the baseball profession has won him deserved popularity.

PROVIDENCE vs. NEW YORK.

The eleventh championship game between the above-named clubs was played Aug. 14 at Providence, R. I., before about eleven hundred people. The visitors outfielded their opponents, and by timely hits in three innings secured the victory. Radbourn and Ward were each hit hard and safely, especially by Ewing, Connor and Start. Bradley's umpiring was unsatisfactory in relation to calling balls and strikes. A wonderful catch by Hines in centre-field was the feature of the contest.

The above result was reversed Aug. 15, the home-team then securing an easy victory. Sweeney pitched effectively, the visitors utterly failing to bat him until the seventh inning, when they bunched three safe hits. In the ninth inning Hankinson drove the ball over the left-field fence for a home run. Welch was pounded from the start, the home-team taking hold of his delivery in the first inning for five hits and as many runs, and they made four more runs in the third inning on four hits and three errors. The weather was threatening and the attendance small. Score:

These clubs contended again Aug. 17, the game having been postponed by rain from the day preceding. The contest was close and exciting throughout, no fewer than twelve innings being played, and each side having several opportunities for winning before the final run was scored. The batting was quite heavy on both sides, and the fielding very sharp. Sweeney commenced pitching, but gave way to Radbourn, whose wild pitching allowed the New Yorks to tie the score in the ninth inning. Then for two innings there was some very sharp play, but no runs. In the last half of the twelfth inning Ward led off with a safe hit, stole to second, went to third on a wild pitch, and scored the winning run on a single by Gillespie. Briggs struck him out by Carroll and Farrell, while Ward showed up well at all points. The score:

CINCINNATI vs. ECLIPSE.

The concluding championship contest between the above-named clubs took place Aug. 13 in Cincinnati, O., the home-team then securing its tenth victory of the series. The local line pounded Heckler's delivery right and left, Carpenter leading off with a home-run and making three more safe hits, while Corkhill and Charley Jones were also each credited with four hits. Magnificent fielding kept the score of the visitors down to three runs, two of which were earned in the fifth inning on a single by Latham and a home-run by Mackrey. McLaughlin made a remarkable running-catch at centre-field. The score was:

BOSTON vs. PHILADELPHIA.

The Boston beat the Philadelphia for the eleventh time in succession Aug. 14 in Boston, Mass. Six scattering safe hits were all that the visitors could get, and only two of them got as far as third base. Buffinton struck out each man of the visitors at least once, and in three innings accomplished the remarkable feat of striking out nine men. The Boston batted Hagan's wild delivery freely, earning three runs, including a hit over the left field fence by Hackett for a home-run, and obtaining four more runs on errors by McClellan and Purcell. Both sides fielded finely, most of the work of the Boston being done by Hackett and Buffinton. Manning made several brilliant running-catches. Gross caught splendidly, and threw five men out at second base. The score:

The Boston beat the Philadelphia again Aug. 15 by their splendid batting. The visitors fielded faultlessly, but, with the exception of McClellan and Harbridge, were weak at the bat. The home-team pounded Coleman for seventeen safe hits, including four home-runs, and earned all of their nine runs. The contest, however, was close and exciting until the eighth inning, when Hornung made a home-run, sending in three men. The score follows:

The game on Aug. 17 was an uninteresting one, the home-team taking the lead in the third inning and securing an easy victory as usual. Morrill made four safe hits and did the best batting. Buffinton's pitching was the only other noteworthy feature of the contest. The score:

DETROIT vs. CLEVELAND.

The tenth game between the above-named clubs was played Aug. 14 in Cleveland, O., and ended in a victory for the Detroit by precisely the same score as that in the contest three days previously. Costly errors by Hotelling and Muldon, together with a base on balls and two safe hits gave the Detroit four runs and the victory in the first inning. The Cleveland were unable to bunt any hits off Jones, and were shut out.

THE UNION-SQUARE THEATRE CO. THUS FAR A FAILURE—McCONNELL TO SURRENDER THE LEASE OF THE CALIFORNIA THEATRE—THE BELLA UNION STILL CLOSED.

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal. (Sunday), Aug. 19.
All of our theatres, save Baldwin's, have done a light business the past week. At the California Theatre the Union-square Theatre Co. in "The Banker's Daughter" has not proved a success thus far, either artistically or financially. Mr. McConnell, who succeeded J. H. Haverly as the lessee of this theatre, is to surrender his lease after Dion Boucicault's engagement. Callender's Minstrels (negroes) did well at the Baldwin last week. At the Bush-street Theatre Sol Smith Russell is to continue only one week longer, as George Holland is to open in "Our American Cousin" Aug. 27. At the Grand Opera-house J. A. Stevens in "Unknown" has played to poor business. Emerson's Minstrels drew a good attendance the past week. Courtwright & Hawkins' Minstrels have proved a bonanza to the Vienna Garden. The Cogill Brothers are to join them 20. "The Magic Flute" has attracted fair-sized audiences to the Tivoli, and is to give place to "The Merry Wives of Windsor" 20. The variety theatres presented no specially new features the past week. The Bella Union Theatre remains closed. Lillie Hastings, Thos. C. Leary and Ronaldo appear at the Fountain. The following have gone East since my last telegram: Sallie Hinchley, Mrs. F. M. Bates and Charles Lord.

A NEW OPERA.

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 21.
A new and original opera entitled "Manette" was presented for the first time evening of 20 at the Pickwick Theatre. The intention was to have presented it at Uhlrig's Garden, but Miss Letitia Fritsch, who was engaged to take the title-role, refused to sing in the open air. The libretto is from the pen of Mrs. H. D. Pittman and the music by Prof. A. Robyn, both of St. Louis. Chas. Lang of the Ford Opera Co. was especially engaged to sing the role of Von Leopold.

The story runs somewhat as follows: Henri Dutois, a rich wine merchant of Alsace, lives in the midst of his vineyard in a chateau on the Rhine. He has one beautiful daughter, Manette, whom he desires to wed to a neighboring nobleman, the Marquis de Villeneuve, an old beau and courtier of the time of Louis Philippe, who, when his king abdicated the throne, retired to his castle on the Rhine, where he lived in solitary grandeur, maintaining the customs and dress of the old regime. Armand, his confidential valet, lately arrived from Paris, has ingratiated himself into the confidence of his master the Marquis by having made the electric-battery an adjunct of the toilet, thereby renewing daily the life and vigor of the old nobleman. Armand is in love with Amalie, the maid of Manette, and contrives that his master shall see Manette and propose for her hand. Thereafter, Manette's spinster aunt, has been trying in vain for years to attract the attention of the Marquis and secure him for herself; she, therefore, watches Manette jealously, and endeavors to frustrate the match. Just at this time a company of German soldiers encamp in the village, turning the heads of the village maidens with their music and parade, much to the annoyance of the staid villagers, who hate everything connected with the German Government, who have them now in subjection. Manette meets and falls in love with the lieutenant of the company, Von Leopold, and consents to elope with him, in order to escape the marriage with the Marquis. They are discovered. She is locked up by her father, and Von Leopold is marched off to the guard-house. Manette escapes, and, preferring death to separation from her lover, secures a dagger and is about to stab herself, when she discovers a cup of red tea in which a sleeping potion has been mixed; mistaking it for "cold poison," she drinks of it and falls asleep, leaving a note for the lieutenant, explaining to him the route she has taken "to that bourne from whence no traveler returns." The lieutenant escapes the vigilance of the guard, and finding Manette dead, as he supposes, drinks also of the tea, and falls asleep beside her. Meantime Armand has been dismissed from his master's service because of his supposed complicity in Manette's elopement, and starts out to seek his fortune as an agent for "The Electrical Life Restorer." He meets Amalie, who tells him of the misfortune which has befallen them; he sees at once the true state of the case, and finds in this double tragedy the opportunity to make his fortune. He attaches the battery, and with Amalie's assistance, the experiment is tried; the lovers awake, and all ends happily.

The cast was thus: Manette, Miss Letitia Fritsch; Von Leopold, Charles Lang; Therese, Matilda Scott Payne; Amalie, Miss Nellie Page; Maria, Miss Fatmah Diard; the Marquis de Villeneuve, William B. Smith; Armand, Josef Haudel; Henri Dutois, Gus Thomas. "Manette" is a light comic opera, simple and harmonious. The opening overture was spirited. The chorus was well drilled and strong. Letitia Fritsch was in good voice, and received several encores. Gus Thomas was happy as Dutois. Lang did not make much of Von Leopold. Matilda Scott Payne made a hit as the spinster aunt. The first act closed with a grand dance. Prof. Robyn was called for and enthusiastically applauded. The house was packed.

BOSTON, Mass., Aug. 21.

The regular season at the Museum opened brilliantly. The audience was large, and the performance excellent. The old members of the company had big receptions. Two new members, Hans Meery and Blanche Thompson, played Chateau Margeaux and the Slave acceptably. The Howard Athenaeum season opened to a crowded house. Hits were made by Harrington and Johnson, Mollie Wilson and the three Fletchers. Large audiences attended the Boyston Museum. Hits were made by Dick Hume and Dolly Gilbert. "Olivette," under canvas in the Park-square Garden, made a success, and there was a good attendance.

PITTSBURG, Pa., Aug. 21.

The preliminary season at the Opera-house opened last night with John F. Ward, an old favorite here. A large and enthusiastic audience greeted him, giving assurance of a good week. Next week J. J. Dowling and Miss Sadie Hasson in "Nobody's Claim."

GEORGE EDGAR'S COMBINATION NOT SUCCESSFUL, EITHER FINANCIALLY OR ARTISTICALLY.

CHICAGO, Aug. 21.

Owen Fawcett in "Dodging" opened at the Grand Opera-house last evening to a good-sized audience. Among the supporting company were Frank Lane, Forrest Robinson and Eugenia Blair. The engagement is for two weeks. Mme. Modjeska is to open Sept. 3. "The Silver King" entered upon its third week at Haverly's to a crowded house. It has proved an immense success here, having attracted large audiences since the opening night. Thomas W. Keene is the next attraction. "Youth" continues the attraction at McVicker's Theatre, the Boston Theatre Company entering upon the eighth and last week of its engagement. The attendance was fair last night. Next week Margaret Mather. "Macbeth" was presented by the George Edgar Shakespeare Company at Hooley's Theatre to fair patronage. This company has received little encouragement during the first week of its existence, and it is but just to say that the promises of the management to present Shakespeare plays with an unparalleled cast and unequalled magnificence have not been fulfilled. Next week, M. B. Curtis. Kohl & Middleton's new South-side Bime Museum will be opened to the public Sept. 3. The regular season of the Academy of Music opens Aug. 27 with Minnie Maddern in her new play of "Juanita." The German Theatre Company inaugurates its new season (Sunday nights) at McVicker's Theatre Sept. 9.

A NEW PLAY.

PITTSBURG, Pa., Aug. 21.

"Top of the Morning," a new and original character play in four acts and six tableaux written for John F. Ward by Fred G. Maeder, was produced for the first time on any stage at the Opera-house last night. A large and appreciative audience was in attendance to welcome Mr. Ward, an old Pittsburgh favorite. Miss Mary Davenport, who sustains a dual role with originality and success, was the leading support. The company are above mediocrity, and by their good work made the acceptance of the play a foregone conclusion. Mr. Ward in the triple characters of Roddy O'Flaherty, Doctor Felix McGillicuddy and Lanty O'Fogarty was the life of the whole performance. The second and third acts, where the climax is reached, made the greatest success. The play will run one week here and then will be produced in Cleveland, O., the week of 27. D. B. Allen is manager and sole proprietor, and Will J. Duffy acts as business-manager. The time of the company is filled for the entire season.

WINNIPEG LACROSSE CLUB.

The annual games of this club were held at Dufferin Park, Winnipeg, Manitoba, Aug. 16. The weather was favorable and the attendance fair. A return follows:
One-hundred-yards run—A. E. Cameron first, in 10 1/4 s.; W. A. Fraser second and A. E. Cameron third. Sadlier led all the way.
One-mile walk—W. E. Bennett first, W. A. Fraser dropping out after the first lap and leaving Bennett to finish alone.
One-hundred-yards run—W. A. Fraser first, in 10 1/4 s.; A. E. Cameron second, by a foot; T. H. Tait third, A. E. Cameron fourth, and J. H. Tait fifth. Cameron accidentally fouled Sadlier, throwing the latter out of his stride, and doubtless causing him to lose the race.
Throwing the ball, club—A. E. Cameron, 105yds. 2ft. 6in.; W. D. Blackford, 95yds. 1ft. 2in.
One-furlong run—W. A. Fraser first, T. H. Tait second. The pistol was fired, leaving Tait on the scratch, but Fraser, not wishing to take an advantage in this way, went back and ran over, winning a pretty race.
Half-mile race—J. A. Campbell first, in 2m. 14 1/4 s.; W. Fish second, J. D. McDonald third, G. Offord fourth. Offord took the lead, which he maintained until the end of the first lap, with Fish second, McDonald third, and Campbell bringing up the rear. At the end of the first circuit Campbell went to the front and stayed there.
Barber's race, 100yds.—W. Martell first, in 12 1/2 s.; Thomas Hall second, and Kelley, John Lang, J. H. Younker and W. Haines ran unplaced.
Three-legged race—W. Gordon and A. E. Cameron first, in 14s.; H. Quigley and H. Finch second.
One-mile race—J. D. McDonald first, in 5m. 3s.; W. E. Bennett second, and A. G. Ross third. McDonald was evidently saving himself in the half-mile race, as he proved his staying powers by winning this race. Bennett made the pace from the beginning, maintaining the lead until the last round, when he was passed by McDonald, who finished several yards ahead of him, Ross being as far behind Bennett.
Hurdle-race, 130yds.—W. Gordon first, in 16 1/4 s.; Jno. Tait second. The hurdles were not the regulation height.
Quarter-mile race—J. A. Campbell first, in 51s.; W. P. Fish second, Offord and Cameron unplaced. The track was short, being only 395yds.
Picking up ball, 100yds., club—A. E. Cameron first, and W. Gordon second.
Sack-race—W. Gordon first, Nixon second. F. Jackes and Allan also ran.
Consolation-race—F. Jackes first, and Nixon second.
In the evening a lacrosse match between teams picked from the Garrys, Winnipeggers and Assiniboines was played by electric light.

ATHLETICS AT BOSTON.

In the expectation that a fine entertainment would be provided on the Boston Baseball Grounds on Monday afternoon, Aug. 13, our correspondent attended the athletic contests between J. F. Hartnett and C. F. Sullivan of Boston and T. Aitken and M. Linsky of Providence. The programme included a 100yds. dash, standing long-jump, running long-jump, standing and running high-jumps, hop-step-and-jump and a hurdle race. Hartnett claimed to have cleared 39 feet in three standing jumps, but his work on Monday did not go far to give the performance much credence. The judges were entirely incompetent and totally unfit for the positions occupied by them, one in particular making mistakes of several feet in measurement more than once. No record can be given any of the flat-jumps. Each pair included a large man and a small man, Hartnett and Aitken being the former.
The hundred yards was won by Aitken; Sullivan second, Linsky third. Standing long-jump, with weights—Linsky 11ft. 4in.; Hartnett, 10ft. 10in.; Sullivan, 10ft. 1in. Running long-jump—Aitken, 20ft. 8 1/2 in.; Sullivan, 20ft. 3in.; Linsky, 19ft. 9 1/2 in. Standing high-jump—Hartnett (with weights), 4ft. 9 1/2 in.; Linsky, 4ft. 6 1/2 in.; Sullivan, 4ft. 4 1/2 in. Running high-jump—In this, as in the standing-high, Hartnett showed himself to be an excellent jumper with weights, facing the bar and clearing the distance with the utmost ease, and at less heights than he could obviously clear. Hartnett, 5ft. 5 1/2 in.; Aitken, 4ft. 11 1/2 in.; Sullivan and Linsky tied at 4ft. 9 1/2 in., and in jumping-off Sullivan cleared 5ft. 1in. Hop-step-and-jump—Aitken, 44ft. 11in.; Hartnett, 42ft. 5in.; Linsky, 40ft. 4in. This was one of Sullivan's events, but in clearing the last round of the running high-jump he turned his ankle, and after two attempts in this event was compelled to withdraw, thus bringing the match to an end in favor of Providence by a score of 23 points to 19.

LAWN-TENNIS TOURNAMENT.—A lawn-tennis tournament, open to all amateurs, will be held on the club grounds, at Pullman, Ill., under the auspices and management of the Pullman Athletic Club, commencing Sept. 7, and continuing until Saturday evening; provided that the number of entries do not require a longer time, in which case the tournament will begin Thursday, and the contestants will be duly notified. Programme: Gentlemen's singles (championship of the West), entrance $2; ladies' singles, no fee; gentlemen's doubles, entrance $4; ladies' and gentlemen's doubles, entrance $4. Gold medals will be given to all winners. The tournament will be conducted under the United States National Lawn-tennis Association rules. Matches will be best two in three sets, without advantage sets, except in finals, which will be best three in five, with advantage games. Ayres' championship balls will be supplied for all matches free of charge. Entries will close Sept. 1, and the drawing of names will take place on Monday evening 3, at Hotel Florence, Pullman, at eight o'clock, and all contestants are invited to be present. All applications for entries and further particulars should be made to C. A. Needham, secretary and business-manager.

JOHN KEENE undertook to give B. James a start of forty seconds in a bicycle-race of twenty miles at the Crystal Palace track, London, Eng., Aug. 6. He found himself unequal to the task, however, James winning by two yards, in 1h. 5m. 14 1/2 s. Keene's time was 1h. 5m. 34 1/2 s.

CHAMPIONSHIP BICYCLE-RACES.

Records Beaten.

The second contest for the professional bicycling championship at fifty miles, for a $125 cup and cash prizes, attracted about seven thousand spectators to the Aylestone Grounds, Leicester, Eng., Aug. 4. There were thirteen entries and nine starters, viz., Fred Wood, F. Lee, P. Medinger, G. W. Waller, F. De Civy, E. Weston, R. Howell, D. Stanton and J. Mac. The first-named was the favorite at odds of two to one. Waller took the lead from Stanton on the first lap, and he held it almost continuously until more than half the distance was completed. After covering thirty miles a spoke became loose in Waller's machine, but nevertheless he kept at work for ten more miles, when he had to dismount, owing to the broken spoke lashing his back severely at every revolution of the front wheel. The moment he dismounted Lee and Wood spurred, and before Waller was in pursuit they had gained over 100 yards, and were fast leaving the others, the excitement at this time being intense. The strange machine did not suit Waller, and he could not get any pace out of it, so he dropped back rapidly, as also did the Frenchman and Weston. Keeping up the spurt, and riding in grand form, Lee and Wood gained over 100 yards each lap on their pursuers, so it was plain that the finish for first and second places rested with them. They overlapped Waller at forty-four miles, and immediately after the long-distance champion gave up, evidently disgusted at his misfortune and the old "crock" of a bicycle he had been compelled to substitute for his damaged one. Lee and Wood overlapped Weston, Medinger and De Civy (riding in close company in the order named) in the second lap of the forty-sixth mile. Lee continued to lead till 440 yards from home, where Wood made his effort and went by with a tremendous spurt, being soon four yards ahead. Lee came again, and down the hill looked like coming to the front once more, their bicycles overlapping, but taking a wide sweep at the corner turning into the straight for home, Wood got away again, and despite another good rush on the part of Lee, finally won amidst tremendous cheering, by eight yards. De Civy, who has evidently not yet recovered from his severe fall in France, stopped four miles from home, leaving his "stable-companion" Medinger and Weston (a promising long-distance rider) to battle for third place, which the Frenchman easily gained, finishing about 750 yards behind the winner. The following table shows the time of each five miles:

Miles.	H. M. S.	M. S.	Miles.	H. M. S.	Duration.
5. Waller.	0 15 12	15 30	30. Lee.	1 59 35	18 20
10. Howell.	0 30 54	15 42	35. De Civy.	1 57 34	17 59
15. Wood.	0 47 07	15 55	40. Weston.	1 55 33	18 17
20. Waller.	1 05 52	16 30	45. Lee.	2 23 12	17 21
25. Waller.	1 21 15	17 23	50. Wood.	2 42 10	14 58

* Denotes fastest professional time on record. † Fastest five miles with a flying start ever ridden by a professional.
On the 6th the ten-mile championship was contested for at the same grounds, the starters being Wood, Howell, Medinger, Lee and De Civy. The latter went off with the lead, and they ran in close order till nearing the mile-post, when there was a general rush, and Medinger booked the first mile to his credit. Lee dashed to the front on the fourth mile, and the pace improved, and in the fifth mile they piled on all steam, and De Civy, who is not yet in his best form, cracked and pulled up; at five miles and a half De Civy was overlapped and immediately afterwards retired from the race. No change occurred until rising the hill in the last lap, about 500yds. from home, where Howell, with a well-timed spurt, shot to the front, followed by Wood; a little further on Medinger went third, and the pace was terrific. Three hundred and thirty yards from the post Wood drew level with Howell, and a neck-and-neck race ensued, but Wood made the turn for home a length ahead, and though Howell came again and drew nearly level thirty yards from the winning-post, Wood had the beat of the final tussle, and just got home, all out, a yard ahead of Howell, who beat Medinger by three yards for second place. Lee pulled up 100yds. from the winning-post. The time of the winner was 30m. 52 1/2 s.

SCOTTISH GAMES IN PHILADELPHIA.

The Caledonian Club of Philadelphia held their twenty-fifth annual picnic and games at Renz Park on Monday, Aug. 20. Over six thousand persons were present during the afternoon and evening, and they watched with interest the games included in the lengthy programme. Results follow:

Five-mile run—John Hourihan first, in 27m. 6s.; Charles Price second, David Bennett third. The prizes in this event were $50, $25 and $10.
Short-race, for boys under 12 years—Harry Smith first, J. G. Hayes second, Harry Brown third.
Standing high-jump—J. F. Keating, 5ft. 1in.; E. W. Johnston, 4ft. 11in.; Eitel, 4ft. 10in.
Sack race over hurdles 18in. high—George Birch first, John Cavanaugh second and George Bennett third.
Hurdle-race, once around the track—Thomas Aitken first, E. W. Johnston second, D. Ader third.
The prize for the best-dressed Highlander was awarded to John A. C. Dixon, and that for the best-dressed boy was divided between Willie and Eugene Miller. Judges, ex-Chiefs William Leitch, Andrew Gillison, B. Gunn, William Robb, J. Sedden, J. B. Jamison, Thomas Mills and Clansmen Paterson and Crombie.

WOOD DEFEATS HOWELL.

The principal event on the closing day (Aug. 8) of the annual Bank Holiday sports, held at the Molineux Grounds, Wolverhampton, Eng., was the one-mile championship bicycle-race between Fred Wood and R. Howell. Things were not highly favorable for the race, as there was a strong wind blowing, with a drizzling rain falling. Howell, being the better beginner, soon took the lead, and Wood then hung to his back wheel like a leech. The first two laps were slow, but entering the third lap Howell piled all steam on. Still no change occurred. Wood quickened at the same time, and the two raced locked together, as if driving a double, until entering the last lap. Here Wood came out to fight for the lead, and 200 yards from home he put on one of his marvelous spurts, drawing level with Howell at the bridge, and finally, passing him about 100 yards from the post, came on, and won amid excitement by three yards, thus decisively proving himself the professional champion from one to five miles. The time of the last lap was 28s., and the full mile 2m. 56 1/2 s.

MANHATTAN ATHLETIC CLUB.—The annual Fall games of this club will be held at their grounds, Eighty-sixth street and Eighth avenue, on Sept. 15, at 4 o'clock P. M. Entries close Sept. 8. Right to reject any entry reserved. Rules of N. A. A. A. to govern contests. Entrance fee 50 cents for each event. Prizes can now be seen at McCue Bros., 176 Broadway. W. McEwen, handicapper.

HOYLE & ACTON have received fifty-nine entries for their one-hundred-and-forty-yards pedestrian handicap, to be run at Pastime Park, Philadelphia, Aug. 25, 27. The shorter-start men are: H. M. Johnson, 11yds.; W. Hough, 12; F. Huret, 12; W. Bowman, 14; D. Sheehan, 15; Fred Ernst, 15 1/2; P. Plunkett, 15 1/2; T. Brennan, 16; E. King, 16; James John, 16; J. Turner, 16 1/2; W. Sheppard, 16 1/2; James Wheat, 17. The prizes are $200, $50, $35 and $15.

ABOUT H. M. JOHNSON.

We have received the following communication from James Dawson of Echo Park, Philadelphia, in relation to the winner of his recent foot-handicap:

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 19, '93.
EDITOR CLIPPER.—Dear Sir: I received an entry for my foot-handicap of July 20th from H. M. Johnson, formerly an amateur and a member of the Williamsburg Athletic Club. He complied with the form of entry to the letter. He did not come on to run in the July handicap, but entered again for my Aug. 13 hand-icap. I gave him a mark to do better than 10 1/4 s. to win. He came on and won, showing 12 3/4 s. in 12 3/4 s. Such running was never shown in any other foot-handicap ever run in America. It being the first time H. M. Johnson had ever run in Philadelphia, everyone wanted to know who he was, and all sorts of rumors were circulated. Some said he had been brought from England, others that he was from Chicago and various other places. So, to give satisfaction, I withheld the first prize to allow someone to prove for or against him. Johnson himself took out the following affidavit: City of Philadelphia, ss: Personally appeared before me the subscriber, Ezra Lukens, Magistrate of Court No. 12 of the said City, H. M. Johnson, who, being duly sworn according to law, doth depose and say, That he resides at Allentown, Allegheny County, New York, and has resided there for a period of two months, prior to which time he lived at Richburg, N. Y., seven miles from Allentown. Dependent is a member of the Ackerman Horse Company of Richburg, N. Y., and was formerly an amateur pedestrian, having been a member of the Williamsburg Athletic Club. Dependent further states that he never had any correspondence with James Dawson, except in regard to the entry for James Dawson's 12th all U. S. foot-handicap, and further deponent saith not.

H. M. JOHNSON.
Sworn and subscribed to before me this 15th day of August, A. D. 1893.
EZRA LUKENS, Magistrate of Court No. 12.
Now, it was my intention to send on first prize to THE CLIPPER, to be paid to H. M. Johnson, if he could prove to your satisfaction he was the H. M. Johnson that was a member of the Williamsburg Athletic Club, but I have to be at New York myself on Thursday next, Aug. 23, on my way to the tournament at South Framingham, and I will meet H. M. Johnson at THE CLIPPER office between the hours of 2 and 3 P. M. to pay him first prize, providing he has someone with him to prove him to be the ex-amateur.

Respectfully,

JAMES DAWSON.

STEELE DEFEATS CUMMINGS.

The result of the match between these two veterans was the victory of the Pennsylvanian, who seems to have put the pace so strong from the first that the Scotch champion cracked. A press-dispatch gives the following account of the contest: "The ten-mile race between Wm. Cummings and Wm. Steele, for a stake of $1,000, was decided at Blossburg, Pa., Aug. 18. The start was made at 5.30, Cummings taking the lead. He remained in front for half a lap, when Steele passed him and kept ahead until the finish of the sixth mile, when Cummings left the track. Steele kept on and made three laps more, after which the referee, Arthur Chambers, called him off the track and gave him the race. Cummings was completely used up, Steele's pace being the fastest ever seen in a long-distance race. Had Cummings stayed on the track and forced Steele to the finish, there cannot be any doubt the record would have been lowered. A disgraceful scene occurred soon after Cummings withdrew from the contest. A man from McIntyre, who had backed him to win, struck him with a cane, and attempted to inflict serious injuries. A bystander, however, interfered and protected Cummings until help arrived. The assailant managed to escape and could not be identified. Before striking Cummings he said: 'Take that, you Scotch thief, for selling out!'"

HANDICAP AT RICHBURG.

The following have accepted the starts allowed them in the Ackerman Horse 135-yards foot-handicap, to take place on Saturday, Aug. 25, at 3 P. M., on Dean's Flats race-track, Richburg, N. Y. W. J. McGarvey will be referee, H. M. Johnson starter, and D. E. Fritz and P. J. Andrews timekeepers: First heat—J. D. Birtwell, 20 yards; J. E. Worden, 26; F. R. Shelleto, 19. Second heat—H. W. Hatch, 22 1/2; J. Stewart, 23; J. L. Myers, 19. Third heat—A. F. O'Donnell, 30; H. M. Johnson, scratch; E. D. Abbott, 25. Fourth heat—A. J. Stone, 22 1/2; H. D. Rowley, 19; W. B. Tibbens, 17 1/2. Fifth heat—W. Keilbaugh, 25; W. Shirk, 23 1/2; H. A. Painter, 32. Sixth heat—E. R. Curtin, 29; G. W. Sands, 20 1/2; D. M. Russell, 24. Seventh heat—J. H. McGarvey, 23 1/2; O. E. Rowley, 16; L. H. Past, 32; G. Kerner, 26.

PULLMAN ATHLETIC CLUB.—The Fall games of this club will be held on their grounds, at Pullman, Ill., on Saturday, Sept. 15, at 1.30 P. M., at which time the following events, open to all amateurs, will be decided: 100yds. run, 440yds. run, 880yds. run, one-mile run, one-mile walk, two-mile bicycle-race, five-mile bicycle-race, throwing 16lb. hammer, hurdle-race (20yds.), long-jump, high-jump and medley-race. Entry-fee, one dollar in each contest. All entries close on Sept. 8. Fee must accompany entry in every case, and will be retained in order to defray a portion of the expense. The committee reserve the right to refuse or strike out any entry. Any competitor not a member of some recognized athletic or rowing organization must be properly introduced by some well-known person who can vouch for his being an amateur. All persons, upon filling their application for entry, if accepted, will receive a certificate of name, giving the privilege of using the ground and track of this association, or horse house, for the purpose of training for contest. This concession is made only for the time intervening between time of entry and contest, and only for contests that are to take place on the association grounds. All applications for entries must be made to Chas. A. Needham, secretary and business-manager, or W. C. Dole, manager of athletics.

ESSEX ROWING AND ATHLETIC CLUB.—This club will hold their first annual games on Thursday, Aug. 30, at Caledonian Park, Newark, N. J., when the following events will be open to all amateurs: 100yds. run, 220yds. run, quarter-mile run, half-mile run, one-mile run, all handicaps. Handsome gold medals to first and silver medals to second in each event. In addition to the above, the following events will be open to all amateurs in New Jersey, for the championship of the State: 100yds. run, for the Essex Cup; half-mile run, A. B. Holmes Cup; one mile run, T. J. Mossey Cup. Entrance-fee, 50 cents for each event. Entries close Aug. 25, with E. C. Pier, 31 Pacific street, Newark, N. J. Games commence at 3.30 P. M.

THE KINGS COUNTY WHEELMEN of Brooklyn, N. Y., one of the oldest and most prosperous and enterprising bicycle clubs of this vicinity, will on Saturday, Sept. 1, give a series of races, open to all amateurs, embracing half-mile scratch, one and two mile handicaps, and twenty-five-mile scratch-races. Elegant and costly medals are to be given in each event; diamond to first, gold to second and silver to third in the 25-mile race; gold to first and silver to second in the other events. Entries close Aug. 29 with E. K. Austin, Box 2,414, New York. Fees, $1 to 25-mile race and 50c. to each of the other races.

FOOT-RACING AND BICYCLING.—There were twenty entries to W. J. Rhoads' 135yds. foot-handicap at Mahanoy City Park, Pa., Aug. 17, the most prominent being Frederick Davis and William Hinton of Philadelphia, Frederick Ernst and James McManus of Germantown, and Jim White of Pittsburg. Frederick Hurst of Mt. Pleasant won the first prize, John Burns of Shenandoah the second, and Lewis third. In the five-mile race John Raine of Canada was scratched, H. M. Johnson had 20yds. handicap, Peter McAnally 140yds., and Robert O'Connell 20yds. McNally won first money, the others running off. In the three-mile bicycle-race John Grant of Shenandoah won.

JUVENILE ATHLETIC CLUB.—This organization, composed of the young sons of actors residing during the summer months at Long Branch, N. J., held a competitive meeting on Saturday, Aug. 18. Prizes of gold and silver medals were offered by Frank Sanger, and the winners were as follow: One-hundred-yards run—F. E. Henderson, defeating D. Mitchell and J. B. Albaugh in the final heat, run in 12 1/4 s. Handicap 150 yards run—George Mitchell. Running long-jump—V. Serano. Pole-vaulting—F. E. Henderson. Young girls who are honorary members of the club also engaged in a lawn-tennis tournament, Fanchon Paddock taking the prize.

SPORTS IN THE HAWAIIAN ISLANDS.—Games were held at Iolani College, Honolulu, H. I., July 26, the successful competitors being as follow: High-jump—D. Morton, 4ft. 8in. Quarter-mile run—E. Stiles. High-jump, boys under 12 years—J. Steven, 3ft. 8in. Three-legged race

LONG-DISTANCE BICYCLE TOURISTS.—Madison-square Garden, this city, has been rented for the week ending October 13 for a bicycle tournament of one hundred and forty-two consecutive hours. The start will be made at midnight of the 7th and the contest will terminate at 10 P. M. 13, as in the case of the pedestrian tourneys held in the same building. Harry Brooks represents the projectors of the affair in this city. A greater degree of interest is now manifested by the public in the bicycle than at any time heretofore, and consequently such an event as this has more chance of success now than it would have had a few years ago. The same parties who are getting up this show announce an eighty-four-hour tournament (fourteen hours daily) to take place at the Exposition Building, Chicago, Nov. 26 to Dec. 1. Full particulars will be given in future issues.

HANDBALL.—On Monday, Aug. 13, a very closely-contested game of handball was played at Sweeney's Murray Hill Handball and Racquet Court, East 35th street, Alderman Philip Casey and Frank Reynolds being pitted against Wm. Courtney and John Bergan. In four games the score was: Casey and mate, 73; Courtney and Bergan, 63.

BICYCLING IN OHIO.—The second series of races of the Columbus Bicycle Club were held Aug. 14. P. J. McConna won the four-mile race; time, 12m. 25s. T. T. F. was first in the mile race; time, 3m. 48s. D. Krumm first in the half-mile race; time, 1m. 41s. Wm. Neil was the winner in the obstacle-course race, one-fifth mile; time, 1m. 22s. D. Krumm led in the hands-off race, one-fifth mile; time, 1m. 55s.

JOHN S. PRINCE, short-distance champion, C. J. Young, long-distance champion, and H. W. Higham are announced to appear in a twenty-mile bicycle race at Athletic Park, Washington, D. C., Aug. 24. Steve O'Donnell, wrestler, and Gus Hill, champion club-swinging, are also to give an exhibition of collar-and-elbow wrestling.

THE AMERICAN ATHLETIC CLUB held a one-thousand-yard handicap-run at the Polo Grounds, this city, Aug. 14, with the following result, the track being loose and dusty. F. Adams, 30 yards start, first, in 2m. 23s.; E. P. Baird, scratch, second, by a foot; Robert Scoll, scratch, third, by five yards.

THOMAS E. KIVLAN of Boston and John H. Taylor of Fisherville, N. H., will wrestle collar-and-elbow, Ed. James' rules, best two in three falls, for $200 a side, Sept. 27; place not yet agreed upon.

THE THIRD SIX-DAYS tournament with Wm. Edwards and Daniel O'Leary at Sydney, Aus., was at last advised that that far-off land postponed to allow Dan's old trainer McEee to connect.

D. A. McMILLAN and Donald Dinnie gave an exhibition of mixed wrestling at Portland, Oregon, Aug. 9, the former winning.

REGATTA AT FALL RIVER, MASS.

The principal event of the scullers' regatta announced to take place at Forest Hill Gardens, Fall River, Mass., Aug. 18, was postponed till Monday, 20, in consequence of the roughness of the water. The amateur race took place, however, but for the same reason nearly all those entered withdrew, the only starters being John P. Buckley of Portland, James H. O'Neill and D. H. Casey of Boston. The distance was a mile and a half, and on public form the former was made a big favorite. The heavy sea knocked him out completely, however, Casey leading all the way, and winning in 14m. 3s., with O'Neill second, in 14m. 40s., and Buckley third, in 15m. 3s., just a minute behind the leader. On the 20th the water was but a little better and the management worse. The spectators began to assemble at 12 o'clock, and by the time set for the races 2,000 persons were present; but it was then found that the water was too rough, and consequently the races were postponed until later in the day. Finally, about 6 o'clock the men proceeded to the starting-point. There were reasons for the reluctance manifested by them to row in the lateness of the hour and the roughness of the water, which still rolled in huge swells, although the wind had calmed down considerably.

At 6:15 o'clock the contestants were got in position, as follows: Elliott, Hanlan, Lee, Ten Eyck, H. Hamm, McKay, Hosmer, Ross, Driscoll, Teemer, Riley, Plaisted and Gaisay. When the signal was given by the starter, on account of the indistinctness of his voice, Hamm, Riley, Hosmer, Plaisted and Gaisay failed to start. The others rowed over the course, despite several signals from the referee's boat to return. Hanlan was first to take water, was soon far in advance of any other contestant, and arrived at the turn fully two lengths ahead of Ross, who was followed by Teemer, owing to a mishap when he was turning the buoy, he was swamped. Ross and Teemer took the lead and made a good race, Teemer coming in a length and a half ahead, McKay third. The time was not taken, and when the men came to the finish they were surprised to learn that the race had to be rowed over.

Much difficulty was experienced in getting the rowers into position again. The start was made at 6:55 o'clock, and it was so dark that the men could not be distinguished by their colors. The start was a good one, Hanlan being a little in advance of the others. Before the first quarter-mile buoy was reached he was two lengths ahead, and was pulling thirty-six strokes to the minute. Hosmer, Ross, McKay and Teemer followed in a bunch, Ross slightly leading. So close were these men that fears of a foul were entertained, but as they sped along they spread apart and Ross gradually increased his lead to two lengths. The other men were scattered over the river, with Riley, Elliott and McKay bringing up the rear. When the turn was reached Hanlan had increased his lead to about five lengths, but again he was swamped in turning. His boat was filled with water, but he held his lead until the steamer Canadocous gave him a swell that forced him to drop his oars. Elliott and Hamm were also swamped. Ross, Hosmer and Teemer, whose positions were on the opposite side of the river, quickly overtook and passed the champion. These three were so far in advance of the others that the rest despaired of getting positions in the race. The contest between them was a fine spectacle. All three were in a heap and hugged the west shore. Teemer gradually forged ahead and won, in 18m. 28s.; Ross second, 18m. 30s.; Hosmer third, 18m. 35m. The distance was about two miles and a half.

At the conclusion of the race there was a controversy between Ross and Teemer as to who was winner on account of the oblique position of the finish. Ross claimed that Teemer did not cross the line, but his objection was not sustained. The prizes of $500, $225 and $125 were awarded to the respective winners. There was no betting during the day, and that done on Saturday was with Hanlan barred. Hosmer was the favorite, but little money was placed on him.

Although the defeat of the champion was the result of accident, it served to break the monotony of his successes, and the lad from the banks of the Monongahela was heartily cheered. Owing to the darkness the consolation-race was postponed till the 21st.

THE POTOMAC REGATTA.

Great preparations are being made at Washington, D. C., for the regatta which is to be held on the Potomac River, Sept. 26. The committee in charge of the arrangements consists of W. T. McKenney, L. McKenney and Flowers of the Annapolites, and Austin Herr, S. E. Wheatley and George Johnston of the Potomacs, and they are hard at work, being resolved to make the affair in every way as successful as that held last week. The events at present arranged for decision, and to which additions may be made, are as follow: Eight-oared shells, Washington Light Infantry Cup, nine gold medals and champion Potomac River Regatta colors. Senior four-oared shells, The Davy Post Cup, four gold medals and colors. Four-oared shells, junior, four gold medals and colors. Four-oared shells, consolation-race, four gold medals and colors. Four-oared gigs, four gold medals and colors. Senior singles, gold medal. Junior singles, gold medal. Special single-sculls, District of Columbia scullers, gold medal. Consolation single-sculls, gold medal. Double sculls, gold medals. The various cups will become the property of the clubs winning them in three consecutive annual races.

ELLIS WARD last week returned to Philadelphia from Washington, but will probably go back to the Capital in a short time to prepare the Columbus for future events.

PAVONIA YACHT CLUB.

The annual union regatta of this club was sailed on Monday, Aug. 20, twenty-six boats participating. The course was from an imaginary line between the judges' boat and a stake-boat off the club-house at the foot of Jersey avenue, Jersey City, thence between Bedloe's and Ellis Islands, thence east of Sand Island buoy, leaving buoy 17 off Robin's Reef on the port hand; the cabin sloops then rounding Fort Lafayette on the port hand, and thence home, passing, as before, between Bedloe's and Ellis Islands. The only thing that occurred to mar the harmony of the occasion was a dispute as to whether the Favorita, which led the fleet home, turned the buoy off Dix Island, it being claimed by protesting crews that she lay in the Narrows until the other boats were returning. The argument warmed, the disputants almost coming to blows, but upon the crew of the Favorita stating their willingness to make affidavit that they had sailed over the full course the judges (who did not follow the races) awarded the first prize to her. The following table shows the result.

NEWARK YACHT CLUB.

Twenty-one sloops and cat-boats participated in the initial open regatta of this club, sailed on Monday, Aug. 20, on a mile course on Newark Bay, starting and finishing off Greenville, N. J. A time-allowance of one minute was given for a foot of measurement. The boats were divided into four classes, namely, topsail sloops, jib and mainsail sloops 18ft. and over, jib and mainsail sloops under 18ft., and cat-boats. The latter were sent off first, and the topsail sloops last, an interval of five minutes taking place between the starting of each class. The following table shows the result.

COURTNEY'S CHALLENGE.

The backer of Charles E. Courtney last week had an interview with Hanlan at Watkins, N. Y., in relation to the matter of the latter matching a half dozen men against Courtney for one thousand dollars a side each race, and was informed by the champion that he had not offered to back anyone against the Union Springs sculler, and did not propose to do so. After the trial-hire in which Courtney was beaten his backer went to Ross and Lee and offered to match him against either or both of them, to row next day or at any time to suit, for one thousand or two thousand dollars a side. The proposition was declined, however, Lee, however, made a reason for refusing to make a match that he had other engagements which would not permit him to do so, while Ross' excuse was that he didn't have the money to put up with himself, and wasn't certain that he could get it. Finding that there was no chance of getting on a bona-fide match with the oarsman who a short time previously had defeated Courtney, the latter's backer withdrew. Subsequently, while at the grand-stand, waiting for the final heat to be rowed, the gentleman placed one thousand dollars in the hands of one of the regatta officials as an earnest of his desire to match the beaten sculler against either of those named. J. H. Brister, who resides in the vicinity of Courtney's home, stated his willingness to back Ross, and went so far as to draw up an agreement, stipulating among other things that the distance should be five miles, and the race take place on Saratoga Lake. The terms were satisfactory to the other side, but, after thinking over the matter a few minutes, Brister concluded not to make the match, and there the negotiations ended. Upon returning to the city Courtney's friend called at this office and withdrew the uncovered fifteen hundred dollars deposited with the challenge to Hanlan, requesting us to state that when anyone, bar the champion, feels disposed to make a match with Courtney for one thousand dollars a side (genuine stakes) and no gate-money business with Courtney, all he needs do is to put up a forfeit of five hundred dollars at this office and he will be speedily accommodated.

WHAT IT WAS WORTH.—Hanlan, it appears, paid Lee and Ross fifty dollars each for the service they performed by beating Courtney in the trial-hire. Courtney, however, was not only shut Courtney out of the final heat, but it had the desired effect of impressing many with the truth of what Hanlan said at Ogdensburg concerning the Union Springs sculler's ability, Ross and Lee being two of the half-dozen named as better than him. Even supposing that Hanlan in making the offer had only this fact in mind, and did not intend to place a premium on unfair practices, his action must still be set down as very small business for a "champion of the world" to be engaged in. Perhaps if the other side had seen his offer and gone fifty better the interference which seemingly lost Courtney the heat would not have occurred.

BOATING AT A PICNIC.—At the Union Telegraphers' Picnic held at Pleasure Island, near Troy, N. Y., Aug. 17, a pair from the Laureate Boat Club of Troy won a half-mile race, defeating the Watervliet pair of West Troy. The Troy crew was composed of Leckner and Harrington, and the West Troy crew of Waterman and Nelson. A junior single-scull event was a walk-over for Williamson of the Laureates. J. K. Emmet Jr. (son of "Fritz") started, however, and beat Williamson with ease, but, not being entered, the prize, a gold medal, went to Williamson.

THE STEAM-YACHT IDEAL, with her owner, T. J. Havemeyer, on board, went ashore on Sail Rock, Me., during a thick fog on Sunday afternoon, Aug. 19, while en route from Bar Harbor to Campobello. A dispatch dated the 20th stated that the yacht had two holes in her bow, and her stern had dropped down with the tide, which filled her at every flood. If not got off before a wind sea in she would go to pieces. Mr. Havemeyer had telegraphed to Calais for a tugboat and to Castine for a revenue cutter.

PORTLAND (ME.) YACHT CLUB.—The race for second-class yachts of the Portland Yacht Club was sailed Aug. 16 over the eighteen-mile course. The following contested: Sloop Willie, Captain K. D. Atwood; sloop Constance, Captain J. P. Thomas; cat rigged Edith, Captain A. M. Smith; sloop Vixen, Captain J. C. Richardson; sloop Milly, Captain A. K. Paul. The Vixen won the race in 2h. 29m. 52s., the Milly being second, in 2h. 51m. 18s.

HANLAN AND COURTNEY are barred from the scullers' race which is to take place at Point of Pines, Mass., Aug. 24, the entries for which include G. H. Hosmer, Wallace Ross, George W. Lee, J. H. Riley, J. McKay, F. Riley, J. A. Ten Eyck, Fred Plaisted, Wm. Elliott and D. Driscoll. The prizes are $200, $150, $100 and $50, and the distance is fixed at three miles, and the referee, James F. Ormond, says he will be careful to see that the course is properly measured and the full distance rowed.

ROWING IN MANITOWA.—The Winnipeg Rowing Club held a regatta Aug. 11, and it proved very successful. The only event was a four-oared contest, but this produced seven races, five of which were rowed by amateurs. The final prize was between A. L. Sanker (bow), J. Kay, C. L. Patton, C. W. Armstrong (stroke) and A. Fox (bow), P. A. Macdonald, J. A. Mackenzie, J. G. Monk (stroke). The former won a good race by a few yards.

TORONTO SWIMMING CLUB.—The result of the race on the first day, Aug. 15, of the Toronto (Ont.) Swimming Club's annual meeting was as follows: 100yds., with clothes on, Paul Patullo, 100yds. green-race, C. Nurse Jr. Remaining under water, Smith, 63s. Fancy diving, M. F. Smith, 50yds. members' race, James Smith, 10s. 10yds. on back, M. F. Smith.

PITTSBURG, PA., is to have a rowing regatta, open to all, during the last week in September. It is announced that the handsome sum of two thousand dollars will be offered in prizes. This proves that the people of Smoketown do not believe in doing things by halves, and are determined to offer big inducements to the leading oarsmen of the country.

THE NEW BEDFORD (MASS.) YACHT CLUB held a race for third-class sloops, over a thirteen-mile course, on Aug. 16, with the following result: Simon's Metric first, sailing time 2h. 28m. 32s., corrected 2h. 22m. 57s.; Sawin's Aragona second, 2h. 30m. 62s. and 2h. 30m. 23s.; Robinson's Curlew third, 2h. 31m. 55s. and 2h. 30m. 42s.

TIM DONOHUE of Newburg, famous as a fisherman of spoon-catchers and sculls, was among the victims of the light-fingered battalion at Watkins. He was relieved of thirty-five dollars of the amount won by him in a pool on the field against Courtney for the first trial-heat.

G. H. HOMER, Wallace Ross, G. W. Lee and Fred Plaisted of the Haulan Rowing Combination announce their readiness to row the four of the Queen City Boat Club of Buffalo, N. Y., a shell-race for one thousand dollars a side. We should say so.

THE SALEM (MASS.) YACHT CLUB held their third championship regatta this season Aug. 17, the winners in the three classes being respectively Eaton's Nirvana, Newcomb's Conus and the D. T. P.

JAMES F. NORMAN easily defeated Peter Day in a sculling-match, for fifty dollars a side, at Halifax, N. S., Aug. 16. He won by almost a dozen lengths.

THE VICTORIA BRIDGE BOATING CLUB will hold their third annual regatta at Point St. Charles, Montreal, Can., Sept. 8. Substantial prizes are offered.

WILLIAM JENNINGS won a mile boat-race at Patchogue, L. I., Aug. 16, in 11m. A ladies' race was won by Miss Lizzie Budd.

BILLIARDS.

THE SERIES OF EXHIBITIONS—in the guise of a tournament, although the leading players (Schafer, Sexton and Wallace) are furnished under a contract with the projectors of the affair—designed for San Francisco began there on the night of Aug. 20, when Sexton beat Wallace by 1,000 to 518, straight three-ball caroms, the winning average being nearly 40. Measured by the San Francisco tournament of 1876 and the Philadelphia tournament that failed to attract the people who had come to see the Centennial Exhibition, this tourney in San Francisco, designed to profit by the conclave of Knights-Templar, can scarcely avoid financial failure, the more especially as at the game chosen Schafer can about discount either Sexton or Wallace, and the latter can almost discount anybody else who is likely to be in for the purpose of filling up. This is the best kind of billiard sport the public can get now, and it is not worth much. The ultimate effect of placing the leading players under contract will, as this paper pointed out long ago, be to impair the interest taken in billiards even by the amateurs on whose patronage the public rooms depend.

HIRAM HENLIN, who about thirteen years ago was proprietor of one of the leading rooms on Broadway, and who for a long period subsequently was connected with George E. Phelps in the manufacturing business, is now associated with the U. S. Standard Billiard Co., which house will in course of time find his billiard experience, no less than his familiarity with public men through his connection with the hotel and the theatrical business, of much service to them.

GEORGE B. BUTTON, who has industriously been giving exhibitions in Easton, Allentown and Mauch Chunk, Pa., writes us that during the present week he is to play in Pottsville, Reading and Harrisburg.

CHARLES E. MURPHY of St. Louis is in Toronto, Canada, on a visit to his son, who is connected with the house of Samuel May. Mr. M. is recently afflicted with the disease of being his contemplated trip to this city this summer.

HERMAN P. BUTLER has won the suit, for the recovery of a pet canary, he brought against John Gault, his former employer.

E. H. NELMS of Philadelphia intends to return to the billiard business. His son Thomas is now in charge of the room at the Bingham House, that city.

G. F. SLOAN and RANDOLPH HEIKER are in a few days to give an exhibition at the room in the Ocean House, Long Branch.

SAMUEL GIBSON has taken the place of Robert Hunter, deceased, as manager of Green's room, Philadelphia.

A. R. SAMUELS, formerly proprietor of the leading room in Brooklyn, is this summer keeping a hotel at Coney Island.

MAURICE DALY has got back from his vacation.

YANK ADAMS is busy in the Northwest with his fingers.

THE TURF.

THE ROCHESTER RACES.

The trotting and pacing meeting at the Rochester, N. Y., driving-park commenced Aug. 14. Results: Class 2:29, purse $1,500—George V. first, Joe B. (with third and fourth heats) second, Mary Cobb third, and Kitty Patchen fourth. Time, 2:29, 2:25, 2:20 1/2, 2:21 1/2, 2:23 1/2. Class 2:24, purse $1,500—St. Cloud first, Sleepy Joe (won fourth heat) second, Louise N. (won first heat), and Barbara Patchen fourth. Time, 2:23 1/2, 2:21, 2:21, 2:21 1/2, 2:22. Aug. 15: Class 2:22, purse $2,000—Tony Newell first, Wilson (won first and second heats) and made a dead heat with Tony Newell for the third heat, and Amelia C. (won fourth heat) third. Time, 2:20 1/2, 2:21 1/2, 2:24 1/2, 2:24, 2:22 1/2. Special, purse $2,000—J. E. Turner's Trunk first, in 2:19, 2:16, 2:17; Phyllis second, in 2:20, 2:20 1/2, 2:24; Billy S. second and Lone Jack third. Class 2:20, purse $2,000—Overman first, Clemmie G. (won first and fourth heats) second, Billy Button third, and Deck Wright fourth. Time, 2:19, 2:19 1/2, 2:19 1/2, 2:22 1/2. Free-for-all race, purse $5,000—St. Julian first, in 2:16 1/2, 2:17 1/2, 2:18; Fanny Witherspoon second and Edwin Thorne third. J. I. Case's Jay-Eye-See made two attempts to beat the five-year-old trotting record, 2:15 1/2, and succeeded at the second; time, 2:14. Aug. 17: Class 2:26, purse $1,500—Sleepy Joe first, in 2:22, 2:23 1/2, 2:22; Stephen G. second, King Wilkes third, and Frank fourth. Pacing race, free for all, $2,000—Richball first, Flora (won second heat) second, Gem (won fourth heat), and Buffalo Girl fourth. Time, 2:15, 2:16 1/2, 2:14 1/2, 2:13 1/2. Class 2:18, purse $2,000—Santa Clara first, J. B. Thomas (won second heat) second, Minnie B. third and William H. fourth. Time, 2:21, 2:21 1/2, 2:23, 2:21 1/2.

THE BRIGHTON BEACH RACES.

Aug. 20, attendance very large, weather warm and track heavy and slow: Purse $250, for maidens of all ages, one mile—Phillips & Co.'s Mount Olive (6d, Camp), the favorite first, in 1:48 1/2; Bit Rebel (7f, W. C. M.) second, by twelve lengths; Moco 105, A. Walker third, by four lengths. Purse $250, selling allowances, six furlongs—F. E. Sage's Early Bird (7f, Church) first, in 1:20 1/2; Reata (2d, Meehan), the favorite second, by half a length; Bradford (9d, Camp) third, by ten lengths. Purse $250, all ages, $50 to second, five furlongs—W. C. Daly's Stringer (7f, Moran), the favorite first, in 1:05 1/2; Spiegelberg (105, Cross) second, by five lengths; Queen Fan (7f, Church) third, by a length. Purse $250, all ages, $50 to second, five furlongs—Callahan & Co.'s Miss Brewster (7f, Meehan) first, in 1:05 1/2; Plunger (105, Conkling), the favorite second, by a neck; Medusa (105, Cross) third, by two lengths. Purse $250, of which $50 to second, seven furlongs—Ackerman & Co.'s Clara A. (11f, Maynard), the favorite first, in 1:33 1/2; Mamie Fields (115, McKee) second, by four lengths; Barney (105, Stone) third, by seven lengths. Purse $250, all ages, $50 to second, a mile and a half—W. C. Daly's Swift (7f, Garrison), the favorite first, in 1:59 1/2; Wyandotte (105, Watkins) second, by six lengths; Buster (11f, Callahan) third, by a like distance.

BUT FOR DAMAGER.—Henry Simons of Louisville, Ky., the owner of the trotting horse John R., has employed counsel in Md. for the purpose of instituting suit against the Bath County Fair and Trotting Association for $5,000 damages for injuries received by his horse in the trotting race Aug. 10. After the third heat the judges decided that Simons was not acting fairly, and took him off and put on a new driver, who Simons claims was green, and drove his horse the wrong way of the track at a 2:30 gait, spraining his ankle and otherwise injuring him so that he was unfit for future trotting, and he sold him for $500. He is confident of winning the suit.

M. M. HEDGES has, it is said, sold his trotter Tony Newell to Chas. W. Reed of Erie, Pa., for $13,000.

MANDAMUS has been sold by C. Reed to W. E. Owens for $1,250.

THE SARATOGA RACES.

Aug. 20, weather inclement, attendance light and track fairly good: Purse $300 for two-year-olds that had not won at Saratoga, five furlongs—R

Hanlan Wins the Race—Courtney Falls to Get a Place. Special Report for The New York Clipper.

JUNIOR SINGLE-SCULLS.

Distance, $1\frac{1}{2}$ miles straightaway; prize, silk banner and gold badge.

Station 1—George A. Griggs, Hornellsville, N. Y.
2—Edward Hinton, Auburn, N. Y.
3—Charles C. Hartwell, Boston, Mass.

gain quite rapidly upon Hinton, whom he deprived of two lengths' lead at the end of the mile and a quarter, the others being as before. Spurring vigorously on the final quarter, Hartwell at last took the pride of place from the Auburners, and finished the race with an advantage of a length and a half. Time, 10m. 14½s. Galliger was a poor third, and Griggs a still worse fourth.

PROFESSIONAL SINGLE-SCULLS.

Distance: trial heats, 1½ miles straightaway; final heat, 3 miles with a turn. Prizes, $300 to first, $200 to second, $100 to third.

RAT.

Station 1—George H. Horner, Borton, Mass.
2—James A. Ten Eyck, Peekskill, N. Y.
3—Henry Sharlow, Buffalo, N. Y.
4—Edward Hanlan, Toronto, Ont.
5—John Teemer, McKeesport, Pa.

A great deal of time was needlessly wasted before the competitors in this heat were got into line, and in the meantime the southeast wind grew stronger and the water of the lake rougher, until it appeared doubtful if the race would be rowed. As nearly all those drawn were anxious, in consequence of existing engagements, to have the heat over, however, the signal was given, and the rowers, who were few in number, started in advance of the line when the word was given, obtained the best of a rather uneven start, the champion following him closely and assuming command within a hundred yards, while Ten Eyck occupied third place, with Teemer fourth and Sharlow astern of the lot. When the youth from the banks of the muddy Monongahela got fairly going he ripped along so fast that he, though in the rear, in a way which certainly relegated Ten Eyck to fourth position, but he could not, despite his strong and well-sustained efforts, quite catch fleet and game Hosmer, who up to the end of the race maintained his place, less than two lengths separating him from Hanlan, who had no desire to make the distance any greater. The champion ultimately finished an easy winner in 11m. 30s. The tremendous speed of the champion was probably due to the fact that he was certainly not rough for satisfactory rowing by scullers, and had it not been for the reason above stated it would not have been started. The victory of Hanlan, although assured beforehand, was received with noisy demonstrations by the spectators on the grand-stand and the boats, of which applause was the only evidence. For, though an easy winner, he gave a fine exhibition of his prowess in the heat.

His lead over Hosmer at the close was about a length and a fifth, while Hosmer led Teemer a length and a half, and the latter was some forty lengths in front of Ten Eyck. Sharlow stopped after rowing a mile or so. The contest between Hosmer and Teemer for second honors was very hard, and the latter, who was always the upper dog in the fight, although, had the water been calmer, there is a probability that the latter would have got into the final heat instead of Gentleman, George. In the pool-selling on this heat Hanlan was almost invariably left out. Hosmer at first selling for ten dollars against eight over the field. Later on Teemer sold even with Teemer, and the other three pools he sold at a profit. In rowing this well-matched contest, however, it was the champion who kept pulling a good stroke all through, and the style in which they finished evoked a great deal of enthusiasm that was not wasted.

FINAL HEAT.

Station 1—Wallace Ross. 2—G. W. Lee.	Station 3—G. H. Hosmer. 4—Edward Hanlan.

So turbulent were the waters of the lake during the afternoon, under the influence of the stiff southeast breeze, the waves being white-capped and angry-looking clean across its broad expanse, that it was an impossibility to resume rowing till half-past five o'clock, when the wind fortunately almost died away, and in the absence of the disturbing element the waves soon subsided, and by the time mentioned the water was as good as any reasonable man could expect it to find. As all were anxious to have it over and get out of town, there were no laggards when they were called into line. Although the victory was conceded to Hanlan, the desire to see "the boss" row, as well as the expectation that the contest for place between the others would be close enough to be exceedingly interesting, proved sufficient to attract the largest assemblage to the course that had yet gathered there. The contestants were aligned without delay and sent away to what was really the best start of the day, there being no perceptible start at all. The first to get away was Mr. Hanlan. Always on the alert to make his election sure of getting out of possible harm's way, as ran/dly as possible, but it ing point, he was at the best and instantly began to draw away, though his gain was not rapid enough to give him an advantage of more than a third of a length at the end of the first quarter. He set his course direct for his turning-stake, while the others held towards the west shore, keeping close company and giving the champion a wide berth. At the end of the first quarter all three were digging away at nearly the same minute-rate, Ross slightly ahead of the other two, and as they rounded the sharp-flashing strokes powerfully pulled by Ross enabled him to obtain second place, but by a few feet only from Hosmer, who led Lee a length and a half, the latter plainly not having entered with the intention of rowing the distance. These were the relative positions of the men at the end of the first half-mile, but in the next quarter Hosmer, by dint of fine rowing and a stroke which was superior in strength but less in level with that of the dark-skinned St. John's. Persevering George then took second place, leading Ross by a quarter-length or so at the end of a mile, at which time Hanlan was a big length in frast, and Lee was out of it, he having retired, presumably because he wanted to husband his strength for the consolation-race, in which he expected to again encounter the sculler whom he appears to have singled out as his special enemy—Courtney. He had been falling back rapidly, and when he quit was nearly a dozen lengths behind. Hanlan continued to lead with ease, had a length and a half over Rose half a length, and Courtney a quarter-length additional at the turn, where Hosmer led Rose half a length. There was no change in the positions of the competitors from this out, the trio giving a magnificent exhibition of sculling, and, while the champion held the others easily, his opponents had to row constantly for all there was in them. Occasionally Rose would gain a little on Hosmer but in a moment they were separated by three lengths, and another moment they were separated by three-quarters of a length. It was manifest that both were rowing their best, and the cheering was tremendous when they came in view of the grand-stand, just before reaching which Hanlan opened out and, going away, won by three lengths, a length and a half separating second and third. The contest afforded the vast crowd of people opposite the finish his greater satisfaction than any he had ever witnessed, and was derived from a race which they had fondly hoped to see their long-time favorite Courtney row. The time was 21m. 9s., which in itself is ample evidence that the winner was not forced to do anything like his best in the matter of speed.

The great event of the regatta over, the spectators returned to town as fast as boats or legs could carry them, not caring to witness the professional consolation scullers' race and the amateur senior-scul race. An attempt had been made at an early hour in the afternoon to get off the latter event, but the storm, which had been threatening since the morning, became so violent in the afternoon that the regatta was abandoned. The starting-point came near being swamped, and had to go ashore half-way and empty out the contents of their shells. When they did row, as soon as possible after the professional final heat, the former won without trouble. The consolation-race was contested by Teemer, Lee, Ten Eyck, Sharlow, Griffin and Plaisted. The absence of Courtney was not surprising, although regretted, as he was the only sculler who had been in the struggle for the greater part of the journey between Teemer and Lee, the former, however, always leading and ultimately winning in 20m. 21s.; Lee second by about three lengths, and Ten Eyck third. Plaisted did not finish the distance.

THE WASHINGTON REGATTA.

Those amateur rowers and crews who could have participated, but failed to do so, made a great mistake in staying away from the Washington Regatta, held on the Potomac River on Tuesday, Aug. 14. It may be set down as the most successful aquatic carnival ever held there, and the members of the Columbia Boat Club, to whom belong the honor of having gotten it up and carried it through, are deserving of all praise for the labor which they willingly performed in a good cause, and for the congenial and successful manner in which they so richly rewarded their efforts. The assemblage of spectators was simply immense, nearly everybody at the Capital seeming to have put on holiday garb and gone to join the throng at the riverside. The crowd was greater than that which gathered upon the occasion of the National Association regatta in 1881, and was only exceeded by the multitude which attended the memorable Hanlan-Courtney fiasco the year previously, when the weather was of the very best, the sun being obscured by clouds that created no apprehensions in the breasts of the unsheltered thousands, while there was a pleasant breeze aging, and the water was in superb condition. The regatta was notable for the fine quality of the rowing characterizing the chief events. The earlier races on the programme were rowed at high tide, or nearly so, and the latter events against the ebb. The dignified and efficient management of affairs managed everything well, thereby winning the thanks of all concerned, either as contestants or spectators. Their names were Chas. E. Coon, Arthur T. Price, W. Howard Gibson, Chas. W. Kintner, F. D. Johns, W. S. Smith, Samuel S. Stinemetz and James R. Lake. The tug Samuel Gedney carried the officials and representatives of the press, and through the regatta was well handled by the man at the wheel, while the tug "Thetis" carried the judges, and was ably piloted by Lieutenant Stinemetz, who, understanding his duty, dared perform it. The tug S. Thomas Brown carried a number of prominent gentlemen as guests of the committee. President Coon having charge of affairs. The officials were: Referee, W. S. White, Rappahannock B. C.; judges at the finish, T. R. Marshall, Samuel H. Wheeler and Frank M. Nesmith; timekeepers, Robert Leding and Frank M. Lewis. The results follow: Columbia Boat Club, J. S. Ziegler, C. J. Kintner (stroke), first, in 10m. 42s.; Columbia Boat Club, J. R. Lake, W. E. Williams (stroke), second, in 10m. 53s. The former couple were the favorites, and they won an easy victory.

Cody was a single-shell steamer. Stephen Kearney, Potomac Boat Club, first, in 10m. 40s.; W. E. Cody, Metropolitan Boat Club, N. Y. City, second, in 11m. 10s.; Richard Sommers, Anacostan Boat Club, did not finish. Kearney was not the choice of the boating cognoscenti, but he took the lead when the signal was given, retaining it throughout, despite the fact that he was guilty of some very erratic steering — something at which Sommers also proved himself to be an expert. Cody steered very well indeed, but he didn't possess the speed of Kearney, who won easily.

Junior four-oared shells—Columbia No. 1. Edson B. Ols (bow), J. H. Fildev, A. D. Kerr, R. B. Ballantine (stroke), first, in 10m. 36½s.; Columbia No. 2, Frank G. Collins (bow), James Leach, W. L. Crounse, W. D. Rudy (stroke), second. The latter crew got off quickest and obtained quite a lead, but when they met their opponents, who were the favorites, settled down, they quickly got upon even terms. For a mile or so the race was interesting, the crews leading alternately, but after that the favorites drew away, and Rudy's men becoming very ragged. Crew No. 1 finished at their leisure, well ahead.

Egdy-car shells—Metropolitan Boat Club, N. Y. City, W. E. Cought (bow), R. R. Schille, B. A. Jackson, W. T. Bonham, P. E. Nagle, M. Wilson, W. R. Kent, James Pilkington (stroke), T. M. McIntyre (coxswain), first, in 8m. 25½s.; Columbia Boat Club, W. A. Smith (bow), R. J. W. Brewster, James Young, J. H. Smith, J. W. Smith, J. W. Woodcock, J. W. Woodcock, Nute (stroke), W. Howard Gibson (coxswain), second, in 8m. 29½s. This was a well contested and fast race. The champion Metropolitan, who were heavier, more muscular and better prepared than their antagonists quickly obtained the lead, although pulling a considerably slower stroke, and, rowing with perfect regularity, they continued to maintain the lead until the very end of the race, when they were overtaken in an interesting contest. To look at, Ward's boys making a determined effort to overhaul the leaders, but failing, although they were vanquished by a scant length only. The crews were heartily cheered at the close by the delighted spectators, and winners and losers greeted each other in a similar manner.

Single sculls, for District of Columbia scullers—L. A. Fisher, Boston Boat Club, first, in 10m. 45½s.; J. R. Lake, Rowing and Sailing Boat Club, second; J. R. Lake, Columbia Boat Club, third. So one-sided was this race that it possessed no interest to the onlookers, Fisher dashing away from the others although they were standing still, and experiencing no trouble in gaining a lead of a score of lengths.

Four-oard gigs—Pennsylvania Boat Club, Philadelphia
G. W. Statzell (bow), W. Nagle, J. J. Vogel, J. H. Beck (stroke)
F. M. Longstreth (coxswain), first, in 9m. 42s.; Richmond Boat
Club, Richmond, Va., Louis Rawlings (bow), E. G. Rawlings

David Edmund, S. G. Fry (stroke), G. P. Hawes (coxswain) second in 9m. 59s.; Cockade City Boat Club, Petersburg, Va. R. Thompson (bow), A. E. Haylor, Samuel W. Hays (stroke), G. P. Hawes (coxswain), third. The Richmond four immediately rushed to the front, and within hundred yards or so placed a length between them and the Cockade City, who were a little in advance of the Penny vanias. When one-third of the distance had been rowed the Cockades were a bit nearer the leaders, while having an advantage of nearly two lengths over the Pennsylvanias, who appeared to be rowing a waiting race and hushing their strength. During the last hundred yards the stroke hand of the Virginians crews had been doing (Cockade 44, Richmonds 48) began to tell on the strength and stamina, and as they came back the Philadelphia boys, pulling thirty-six to the minute, strong and with regularity, went quickly up to them, assumed command, and retained the lead to the end, winning with something in hand. The others had a sharp struggle for second honors, the Richmonds outlasting their antagonists and winning with four minutes of the best time of the most exciting race of the day. The prizes were the valuable Palmer Cup, a commemorative banner and gold medals.

Senior style-sculs—P. A. Dempsey, Pennsylvania Boat Club Philadelphia, first, in 10m. 23s.; James Pilkington, Metropolitan Boat Club, N. Y. City, second, in 10m. 38s.; W. C. McKinney, Potomac Boat Club, Washington, third, in 10m. 40s.; E. Waterman, St. John Rowing Club, New Orleans, 0; E. B. Morgan, Eclipse Rowing Club, New Orleans, 0. The latter two were disqualified for not starting in time.

Junior style-sculs—P. A. Dempsey was a strong favorite, and, alert as ever, he managed to secure the best of the send-off, McKinney a shade before the New-Yorker, who was well thought of by many. The superiority of Dempsey, who scullled in finished style, was quickly made apparent, and after gaining a length advantage he had no trouble in maintaining it. Stalling off the determined efforts of Pilkington, after he had shaken off the Washington sculler, McKinney, Dempsey showed that he drew near the finish, and opened a gap of half a dozen lengths, which he finished with, Pilkington crossing the line a length before McKinney.

Four-cared skis—Hillsdale Rowing Club, Hillsdale, Mich., L. F. Beckhard (bow), Alex. Stock, T. Havens, C. W. Terrillier (stroke), first, in 8m. 40s.; Eclipse Rowing Club, New Orleans, La., F. Bilhardt (bow), J. Bilhardt, C. Hussin, C. Rubin (stroke), second, in 8m. 59s.; Ottawa Rowing Club, Ottawa, Ontario, H. B. S. Lane (bow), A. Barrett, E. J. Johnstone, J. E. O'Connor (stroke), third. The crew of the Canadian Club—Oscar Woodward (bow), J. K. Kondrup, R. H. Wade, F. Nute (stroke)—although hardly in a condition to hope to win, intended to participate also, but on their way to the starting-point they unfortunately broke a stretcher, and were obliged to return to the boat-house. Had they started they would doubtless have gained a place. The crew from the Crescent City rowed a quick race, that of stroke running up to more than fifty feet per minute, followed by the Canadian Club, flying forty-four, Hillsdale last, with a stroke of upwards of fifty to the minute. The end of the first hundred yards saw the latter in second place, and, going on, they quickly gained the foremost position. At the end of the half-mile they were a good two lengths in front, the Ottawas being about the same distance to the rear of the Canadians. The Michiganders had the lead, but the Ottawas had closed the gap between them to five lengths ahead at the close of the first mile. The Ottawas here commenced to close the two lengths' gap between them and the Eclipse crew, but the latter always had enough in them to keep the Kanucks at a safe distance. Their efforts to hold the Hillsdales were fruitless, however, the latter crew easily increasing their lead at will and ultimately winning by about half a dozen lengths. Thus the reorganized Hillsdales captured the prize for the first time, and the Eclipse crew were left with each of the oarsmen composing the crew received a gold medal.

In the evening the successful competitors were awarded the prizes in the red parlor of the Riggs House, where were assembled the competing oarsmen and a number of invited guests. General West made the presentation speech, in the course of which he complimented the oarsmen from other cities and humorously "let down" the home crew for their defeat. The latter, however, did not mind this, and they were very pleasant things that caused merriment and evoked applause. This pleasant ceremony at an end, the party adjourned to another room, where a bountiful collation was served and partaken of with praiseworthy zest, and where the health of the participating oarsmen and about everybody else was toasted, and the friendship existing between the amateurs of the East, West, North and South cemented by social intercourse. The time passed pleasantly and the day was closed in the manner in which their wants were anticipated and attended to by the Columbias, and the generous manner in which they were treated by them. Although not having carried off many prizes, they won the esteem of all.

A MONSTER SAILING REGATTA.

The largest sailing regatta ever held in this country, and probably in the world, took place off Marblehead, Mass., Aug. 18, under the auspices of the Beverly Yacht Club. Of 237 yachts entered, 158 started. There were 114 starters in last year's regatta, which was the largest sailed up to that time. The yachts were divided into six classes, the first for schooners, including cutters and sloops over forty and under fifty feet on the water line; the second for cutters and sloops under thirty, sloops, cutters and cats over twenty-five and under thirty; fourth, over twenty-one feet and under twenty-five; fifth, over seventeen feet and under twenty-one; sixth, seventeen feet and under. In the second, third, fourth and fifth classes separate prizes were awarded to the centreboards and keels. The course for first and second classes was 19 and 12 miles, respectively; third class, 15½ miles; fourth, 10½ miles; fifth and sixth, 8 miles. The judges were Thayer, Jeffries, Blake, Goddard and Gardener were the judges. There were first, second, third, fourth and fifth prizes in gold given to each class, and no entrance-fee was charged. The time-allocation was taken from the formula of "length on the water-line" measurement. At the time of starting there was not a breath of air, and the special class were carried along at a snail's pace. The light breeze gradually freshened, favored the second-class boats. This breeze gradually freshened until by the time the sixth class was ready a good sailing-breeze prevailed. The following table shows the first and second boats home in each class:

LARCHMONT YACHT CLUB.

The club-boat, for class 5, open jib and mainsail yachts, was sailed for by boats of this club on Aug. 18 over a course of eighteen miles, starting from off the club-house, sailing to and around the spar buoy off Execution Light, leaving it on the port hand, thence to and around the Mattinecock buoy, leaving it on the starboard hand, thence to the buoy off the buoy and thence to finish. The competing boats were as follows: H. Sanderson's Zoe, 22ft. 8in. sailing length; E. H. Wales' Fedora, 22ft. 11in.; Frank M. Scott's Hornet, 22ft. 11in.; Everett Rushmore's Oriente, 21ft. 11in.; Thomas Mott's Jewel, 19ft. 8in. The wind at starting was from southwest by west, the tide set was ebb, and the water was smooth. The lover of yachting, the stretch to the home stakeboat in particular being excitingly close. The Oriente ran her bowsprit so close to the Hornet that the latter was unable to haul in her main-boom, and she fouled the stakeboat, breaking the flag-staff in three pieces, while the Oriente continued on her way. Several other boats of the club boats went around in proper style. The judges—William B. Jenkins, Frederick W. Flint and William Seymour—were in a small boat near the stakeboat. When the yacht fouled the stakeboat they nearly swamped the judges' boat as well. The judges retired to an upper room in the club-house to take up the race, and the Oriente was the victor. The boatmen of the Hornet on the ground that the Oriente was the cause of the foul. The official time of the race was as follows:

SWEETSTAKES REGATTA.—Arrangements have been completed for a sweetstakes sailing regatta for open yachts, to be sailed in New York Bay Aug. 28. The race is to be for yachts not over thirty feet in length. The course will start from the foot of the Atlantic club-house, foot of Fifty-fifth street, Brooklyn, west-northwest one and a quarter miles to and around the Channel buoy south of Robbins Reef light, then south by east, quarter east, six and a quarter miles, to and around stakeboat anchored off Coney Island Point and back to starting-point, sailing the course twice over. The exact location of the stakeboat off Coney Island Point will not be known until the morning of the race, when the judges will place the boat, with instructions for those sailing to place it as close to the yachts, as far as possible, a half-windward course. The boats now entered are the Susie S., owned by E. B. Miller this city; the Mistake, owned by Charles B. Elliott of Greenpoint; the Snoozer, owned by Thomas Kells of Greenpoint.

SWIMMING RACES.—The New York Athletic Club will hold one-hundred yards and one-mile swimming races for the amateur championship of America on the Harlem River on Saturday, Sept. 15. The competitions will be open to all amateur swimmers whose amateur standing is properly vouched for. Handsome and valuable prizes will be given to first and second men. Entrance fee of $2 will be charged for each event, and entrance closes on Saturday, Sept. 8. All communications should be addressed to Wm. Wood, secretary, P. O. Box 3, 101, N. Y. City.

THE COLUMBIAN ROWING ASSOCIATION of Boston, Mass., had a four-oared race over the two miles. Apple-landed in 15:14, with the following result: P. McLaughlin (bow), T. Doyle (stroke), J. O'Hearn, J. J. O'Hearn, J. J. O'Hearn (second), M. Foley, T. McKenna (stroke), first in 15m.; T. Shaugnessy (bow), J. P. Green, E. J. O'Hearn, J. J. O'Hearn (stroke), second in 16:00; D. J. O'Hearn (bow), J. Doyle, P. Finn, A. West (stroke), third in 16:10; W. Sweeney (bow), M. Quinn, N. G. Lafferty, T. Roach (stroke), fourth. After the crews got through fouling at the start gun an interesting contest was witnessed. Referee, Peter O'Neil, starter, Louis Leary.

JOSH WARD, the veteran ex-champion, according to a patch from Cornwall, N. Y., dated Aug. 17, would like to make a match for $500 a side to row C. E. Courtney at that place three miles with a turn. The latter's backer informs us that Courtney will not make a match for the amount named.

OVER ONE HUNDRED ENTRIES have been received for the open regatta of the Hull Yacht Club on Saturday, Aug. 25, a double that number is expected before Friday, the date of close of the entries. Prizes to the amount of $1,000 offered.

J. H. RILEY and William Elliott have been matched to p a mile-and-one-quarter race for $100 a side, and the con will probably take place on Saturday, Aug. 25, at the Point Pines, Mass.

NONPAREIL BOAT CLUB.
The annual regatta of this club was held on the Harlem River on Tuesday, Aug. 14, when, as the weather was favorable, there was a goodly turnout of the friends of the members, the majority of whom found accommodation on board the large anchored at the usual spot, below McComb's Dam Bridge. The races were all rowed over the one-mile course, ending at that point, and the results were as follows: Junior single sculls—Thomas J. Mullen first, in 8m. 45s.; Thomas Wade second, 9m. 5s.; J. T. Penfield third. Arthur Braun did not finish. Senior single sculls—W. J. Mulcare first, in 7m. 5s.; M. Carroll second, 7m. 25s. Fair-oared gigs—Herman Krenger, Hugh Cordana (stroke), first, in 7m. 52½s.; Ike Mass, William Mulcare (stroke) did not finish. Junior four-oared gigs—E. Metzger (bow), James T. Penfield, William G. Bell, J. Dwyer (stroke), W. Bernard (coxswain) first, in 7m. 52s.; B. H. Lee's crew second, in 8m. 5s. Six-oared gigs—W. G. Bell (bow), W. O. Ryan, J. T. Penfield, Louis Arnold, Ike Mass, Frank Sahulka (stroke), B. H. Lee (coxswain) first, in 8m. 59s.; H. Symonds' crew second, in 9m. 2s. J. J. Murphy's crew finished first, in 9m. 48s. but were disqualified for a foul. An excursion on the Sound, with dancing by the light of the moon, followed the regatta. Jas. McCartney was referee.

THE LAKE WASHAUCUM REGATTA.
Several thousand spectators were in attendance at the regatta for professional spectators held on Lake Washaucum, Sterling, Mass., Aug. 17. A worse course than that afforded by this sheet of water it would not be easy to discover, but for such an event as this it was good enough. It was across the lake and return twice, making three turns necessary, and the distance was about a mile and three-quarters in all—rather under than over. Positions were drawn in the following order: Lee, Ross, Homer, Ten Eyck, Hanlan, Elliott, Driscoll, Teemer and McKay. Lee got the water first, but pulled the first quarter of a mile nearly in a line. Hanlan then drew out of the bunch and easily held the lead to the finish. Hanlan turned first, Lee second, Ross third and Homer fourth. Ross passed Lee on the second half-mile, but made a mistake and went around Homer's stake. In turning Homer hit Ross' boat and Ross stopped rowing. Hanlan made the second and third turns first, Homer second, Lee third, Ten Eyck fourth and Teemer fifth. The race closed with the first four in the same position. Hilley and Tweed of Boston, both professionals, rowed in what was called an amateur race, which was won easily by Hilley, Tweed second and Cunningham third.

PULLMAN A. C. REGATTA.—The Pullman, Ill. Athletic Club held a rowing regatta, open to all amateur clubs, Sept. 15. The events are as follows: Single-scutt, for juniors only, entrance $2; double-scutt, for juniors only, $3; four-oared gig-race, $5; four-oared shell-race, $5; six-oared barge-race, $5. Entries close Sept. 8, and the entrance fee must accompany entry in all cases. Any competitor not a member of some rowing organization must be introduced by some person who can vouch for his being an amateur. Persons filing application for entry, if accepted, will receive a certificate, giving privilege of using the boat-houses of the Association for the purpose of training between time of entry and contest.

*We are aware of the repetition in Enigma 1,388, but have reproduced it to secure a solution.

BRAYO, OLD DOMINION.—Our contributor Chas. L. Page sends us the following thoroughly welcome news from Manchester, Va. He writes: "We expect to establish a club in Richmond in the early part of the coming fall. When we get the club started, look out for a handsome account of herself from the Old Dominion, as we intend immediately thereafter organizing a state tournament. I have already received promises of co-operation from various parts of the State. Virginia is not dead, chessically; all she wants is someone to catch her the rope, and give her a good shake."

THE NUREMBERG CONGRESS.—The full reports show the large number of 21 entries, with 19 actual contestants. The full list stands: Bardeleben, Berger, Bier, Bird, Blackburne, Fritz, Gunsberg, Hrubý, Lange, Leffmann, Mason, L. and W. Paulsen, Riemann, Schallopp, Schottlander, J. Schwartz, Weiss and Winawer. The field, just received, has the result of seven rounds, thus: Herr Emil Schallopp, 4½ games; Berger, Gunsberg, Riemann and Winawer, 4; Bardeleben, Blackburne, Hrubý and L. Paulsen, 3½; Schottlander, Weiss and Schwarz, 3; Bird, Fritz, Mason and W. Paulsen, 2½ each. Just at closing this copy we have a report that Herr Winawer won the first prize; Mr. Blackburne, second; Jas. Mason, third. Next week we intend giving Fritz's beautiful victory over Mason.

Wm. WIRT SYKES, the husband of Olive Logan and U. S. Consul at Cardiff, Wales, died there Aug. 18.

THE NEW OPERA-HOUSE in New York, N. Y., is not to be on the site of Washington Hall, and the work of tearing down that building was not commenced Aug. 13, as was stated in our past issue. We got our information from a telegram from New York to an evening journal in this city Aug. 14, the night THE CLIPPER went to press. The Gazette of New York says: "Warburton Hall has not been interfered with in the least. It is intact and ready for use at any time, and will so continue even after the new opera-house is completed."

S. C. COLE, who has very efficiently represented THE CLIPPER as its correspondent in Indianapolis, Ind., for some years past, has been compelled to resign, owing to serious ill-health. He is suffering from bronchitis, and one of his lungs is affected. He writes that he has been unfit for labor of any kind for the past two months. He has our thanks for his past services, and we trust that with rest his physical condition may improve.

SEVERAL PEOPLE are wanted for the Hernandez Dramatic Company; also an orchestra-leader. Address Hernandez & Harris, as per advertisement.

CALL.—The members of the Rehan Combination are requested to assemble at Daly's Theatre, Aug. 28, as per card. The company includes Louise Dillon, Mrs. Clara Fisher Maeder, Marie Floyd Jennie Light, Ernest Barran, Harry Hottel, Geo. Vandenhoff, J. F. Raymond, J. F. De Gier, W. H. Rums. The season will open at New York, N. Y., Sept. 3; thence to Morristown, N. J., 4, Newburg, N. Y., 5, Paterson, N. J., 6, Newark 7, 8, New Brunswick 10, Trenton 11, Lancaster, Pa., 12, Jersey City, N. J., 13, 14, 15.

THE COMPANY to support Oliver D. Byron and Kate Byron this season is to consist of Sadie Montgomery, Gracie Murray, Rose Armond, Harry B. Hudson, Fred Warren, Chas. E. Eldridge, Max Miller, Clarence Harvey, C. J. Kelly Jr., T. Alexander, Chas. J. Fleming, Royce Alton, Marcus Meyer, leader of orchestra; J. P. Johnson, manager; Wm. Crehan, assistant manager; Walter Berry, advance agent. The season is to open at the Howard Athenaeum, Boston, Sept. 24. THE RICHMOND (VA.) THEATRE is to be opened for the season Aug. 24 with Barlow, Wilson & Co.'s Minstrels as the attraction. The theatre has been repaired and presents an attractive appearance.

THE "NOBODY'S CLAIM" COMBINATION, which commenced its season at Ford's Grand Opera-house, Baltimore, Md., Aug. 20, is due in Pittsburgh 27, Windsor Theatre, New York, Sept. 3. J. J. Dowling is the star, J. S. Alexander sole proprietor, and J. H. Laine manager.

Daymond and Selma Paxton. W. A. Gregg is the manager, and A. B. Bennett advance agent. Route: Frankfort, Ind., Aug. 28, 29, 30, 31, Sept. 1, Bluffton 3, 4, Kokomo 5, 6, 7, 8, Liberty 10.

J. H. H. VERLEY, as we have before stated, is no longer connected with the Brooklyn Theatre, W. A. McConnell having assumed the sole management of the house. A number of alterations and improvements have been and are being made. The manager's office has been rebuilt and enlarged. All the doors in the interior of the house have been removed, and in their place are to be hung heavy damask curtains. Colored glass globes have been placed upon the gas fixtures in the lobby. The theatre has been repainted, and new and handsome carpets are to be laid. On the opening night, Aug. 27, "The Silver King" will be performed for the first time in Brooklyn.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., says our correspondent, "has two almost new theatres, as Macaulay's and the Buckingham have been so thoroughly renovated that there is very little of the interiors of the old houses left. Upon the curtains, new chairs, and have been repainted and regilded, and now compare favorably with any other theatres in the West."

J. N. GOTHOLD of Pittsburgh, Pa., joins Tom Keene's company as leading man.

"FUN IN A BOARDING-SCHOOL" closed at the Opera-house, Louisville, Ky., Aug. 8, after a week of light business. They play one-night stands through Indiana for the next two weeks. Mr. Ince's agent, Mr. Gayler, has entered suit against Lisette Elliott for playing his piece without permission.

AT THE OPERA-HOUSE, Pittsburgh, Pa., John F. Ward opened Aug. 20 in "Top of the Morning." Next week Jos. J. Dowling in "Nobody's Claim."

THE BROOKLYN PARK THEATRE, which is to reopen Aug. 27 with Rice's Travesty Company in "Fun on the Bristol," has been renovated, repainted and redecorated during the vacation. ORCHESTRAL OFFICERS.—Missie Madge, new play company, who had been rehearsing the past week, will play "Juanita" by C. E. Callahan, open Aug. 20 at Frankfort, Ind., and after a week through Indiana open their regular season in Chicago 27. "Smiley" Walker of this city goes in advance of Josephine Kelly. "Lizzie Evans and company passed through the city 19 en route to Lima, O. Haglin's Theatre will positively open Sept. 1. Thus far attractions have been booked for thirty weeks of the season.

"A MOUNTAIN PINK" was withdrawn at the Grand Opera-house, Chicago, Ill., Aug. 18, after three weeks of good business. Miss Louise Sylvester will star in the piece during the coming season.

JOS. J. DOWLING'S "NOBODY'S CLAIM" Co. opened their season Aug. 20 at Ford's Opera-house, Baltimore, Md., to a fair-sized house. Armstrong Brothers' Minstrels closed 18, going to Washington, D. C., 20.

IMPORTANT ALTERATIONS have been made during the summer vacation at the Grand Opera-house, Brooklyn, L. I. The storm-doors formerly used at Booth's theatre have been placed at the entrance, and in the auditorium is the large chandelier which once did service at that house, while the footlights from Booth's have been placed upon the stage. Several rows of chairs have been removed from the rear of the orchestra, and the space gained has been added to the lobby, the width of which has thus been increased to eleven feet. Between the lobby and the auditorium a partition containing fifteen imitation stained-glass windows has been erected. Instead of three aisles in the orchestra, as formerly—one in the centre of the house and one on each side—there are now four, chairs having been placed in the space occupied last season by the centre aisle, and two new passage ways made through the body of the house, an alteration which is in every way an improvement. The floor has been raised about four inches. The house has been repainted throughout, and new carpets are to be laid. The exterior of the theatre will be illuminated by about three hundred gas-jets in place of the electric lights used last season. The Grand Opera-house is to reopen Saturday, Sept. 1, with "Pique," Mrs. Agnes Booth essaying the leading role.

THE NOVELTY THEATRE, Brooklyn, E. D., has been thoroughly renovated during the summer and a new drop-curtain painted by J. B. Ayers, the scenic-artist of the house. The theatre will reopen Sept. 3 with "The Roman Rye."

THE LEE-AVENUE ACADEMY OF MUSIC, Brooklyn, E. D., will not reopen until Oct. 1. Before that date the house will have been renovated throughout. A lobby 75 feet in length has been built in front of the theatre, new boxes have been placed in the auditorium, and some alterations have been made in the stage. The opening attraction will be "The Lights of London."

THE VILLAS (Agnes, Lucie and Sam B.) have commenced rehearsals at the Academy of Music, Jersey City, preparatory to opening their regular season in Norristown, Pa., Aug. 24; thence to Reading 25, Harrisburg 27, Altoona 28, Johnstown 29, Uniontown 30, Scottsdale 31, East Liverpool Sept. 1, 3.

HENRIETTA CHAMFRAY and company, under C. W. Taylors' direction, open their traveling season at Chelsea, Mass., Sept. 3, playing in New Bedford 4, Fall River 5, Plymouth 6, North Attleboro 7, Milford 8, Frank Wells, Clinton Hall and S. M. Verney are in the company.

BARTHOLOMEW'S "EQUINE PARADOX" is to commence the preliminary season of the Lyceum, Philadelphia, Sept. 10. The regular season will not begin until Oct. 1.

TONY DENIER'S "HUMPTY DUMPTY" PANTOMIME AND SPECIALTY TROUPE, with two clowns and a strong array of performers, will be again one of the leading attractions on the road the coming season, and it is promised that a better show than ever will be presented. The company roll is a long one, and the names are as follows: C. W. Ravel and Geo. D. Melville, clowns; Walls and Home Leonard, Leona Fontainebleau, the Lorbey, Prof. Gleson and his school of trained dogs, Minnie Bessie, Mlle. Eibe, the Talmen Brothers, Patti Mortimer, Pettigall and Fraser, Tilson and Errol, John Corrihan, Prof. F. E. Butters, leader of orchestra, E. P. Wilbur, band-leader, Louis E. Benz, property-man, and John Stephens, assistant. Tony Denier is the sole proprietor, Geo. S. Sydney manager, and Edward Trail business-agent. A call is published in another column, in which are also published a number of particulars of importance to those engaged.

AT THE GRAND OPERA-HOUSE, Rochester, N. Y., Tony Pastor's Variety Co. appeared to a large audience Aug. 14, and gave a very satisfactory entertainment. Route: Buffalo 15, Cleveland, O., 16, Dayton 17, Cincinnati 18, one week, Indianapolis, Ind., 20, St. Louis, Mo., 27, one week. During the past two months this theatre has received such repairs in the interior that it is now one of the most convenient and cosiest theatres in Western New York. The management of Phil Leiman of Syracuse and Assistant-manager D. W. Truss of Rochester it has become very popular.

FREDERICK WARD is to open his season Aug. 27 at White's Grand Opera-house, Detroit, Mich. The company includes Anna Boyle, Frances Field, Sara Goldberg, Flora Gaines, John T. Malone, L. F. Rand, James B. Curran, J. M. Sturgeon, C. Belmont, J. A. Kinscote, F. W. Jackson, T. E. Garrick, Robert Woodman, Gustave Heege and Frank Van Horn, T. M. Bottomingham is the treasurer, C. W. Roberts business-agent, and John J. Collins manager.

CONN VS. PEPPER.—The appended extract from The Elkhardt (Ind.) Evening Review of Aug. 13 explains the cause of a libel suit commenced by C. G. Conn against J. W. Pepper, the Philadelphia musical instrument manufacturer.

It is known here that J. W. Pepper, a hand-instrument manufacturer of Philadelphia, has made outrageous assaults upon the business integrity of C. G. Conn, and has for some months made statements regarding Mr. Conn's factory that were not borne out by the facts. Mr. Conn has endured this until force became no longer a virtue, and last week began action for libel. The following from The Philadelphia Press of Friday, Aug. 10, gives full particulars. It says: James W. Pepper, manufacturer of musical instruments at Eighth and Locust streets, was arrested this afternoon upon the charge of libel preferred by Charles G. Conn, also a manufacturer of musical instruments at Elkhardt, Ind. Pepper published a paper in which it is alleged, on Aug. 1, he made an attack on Conn, charging him with being an impostor and guilty of false pretenses. The article complained of also stated that Conn misrepresented his facilities for manufacturing, and was illustrated by two woodcuts, one showing the building Conn claimed to occupy, and the other a sketch of what it is stated he really used as a manufactory. Pepper waived a hearing before Magistrate Lennon, and was held in $1,000 bail to answer at court.

A CORNET-PLAYER and a double-bass and tuba player are wanted. See E. C. McCall's card.

THE FORD COMIC-OPERA Co. began their second week at Macaulay's Theatre, Louisville, Ky., Aug. 20, playing "To-lanthe," "Black Cloaks," "Heart and Hand" and "Rip Van Winkle" are to be put on during the week. Business is only fair.

REMODELED, REDECORATED and REOPENED.—Our Boston correspondent writes: "The regular season at the Howard Athenaeum opened to-night (Aug. 20), and the event is worth more than ordinary mention. As announced some weeks ago, the house has undergone an important change during the summer recess. In the first place, the old-style wooden balcony and gallery fronts have been torn away, and a new fancy lattice-work of iron, touched up in bronze, makes an agreeable substitute. Four private-boxes now adorn the house, two on either side, and all handsomely fitted up. A new and very pretty brass chandelier, with glass pendant, hangs from the centre of the dome, which has been redecorated in charming style. Four exits have been constructed, a brick wall has been built to separate the stage from the auditorium, and what with a new footlight-guard, new dressing-rooms, new scenery and drapery and a new drop-curtain, it may be imagined that the change is as radical as it is charming in effect. The new curtain is by Henry L. Reid of Providence, R. I., and is an excellent design, painted with much care and taste. The whole interior of the house has also been repainted, and new carpets have been laid throughout. The new season, as had been expected, opens with a change in management, the style being Rich & Harris, though Mr. Harris continues as active manager. The remainder of the executive staff is as follows: Stage-manager, Geo. B. Radcliffe; treasurer, Charles R. Rich; assistant-treasurer, W. H. Gallagher; leader, Harry Saxton; scenery, David Richards; advertising, John Bowman; mechanic, B. B. Harris; properties, W. O'Brien; gas, George Bowman. The opening bill was of the strict variety order, comprising the following people: Carlo Benedetti, Thos. A. Day, Lizzie Derions, Dan Collier, Sheehan and Coyne, the American Four, Harrington and Johnson, Bingham, Conroy and Dempsey, Mollie Wilson, Pickert and Vincent, Isabel Ward and the three Fletchers. The improvements noted above represent an outlay of between $12,000 and $15,000—not $2,000, as previously stated in THE CLIPPER."

AT THE BOYLSTON MUSIC-HALL, Boston, Mass., last week's business continued good. The departures Aug. 18 were Henry Wilmot and Kelly and Watson. New faces 20: Gerlie Holden and Walter Bray.

CLOSING at Slensby's Theatre, Milwaukee, Wis., Aug. 18, were Rose Hall, Harry and Emma Ewantine, Ullie, Billy Mack, Edith Valentine, Boyd and Sarsfield, Frank Young and Mary Milton. Opening 20: Willie Hamilton, Lulu Wiley, "Tipton" Fields, Hughes and Norton, Mack and Coulter, McNew and Martelle and the Three Wertz Bros. Business the past week was good.

THE PARK THEATRE, Chicago, Ill., will open its Fall and Winter season Sept. 3. The place has been newly refurbished and a new gallery has been added. A leader and several musicians are advertised for; also performers in various specialties. J. D. Long is the sole proprietor and manager, and H. P. Williams, amusement manager, in care of this office.

J. K. JOHNSON, song and sketch writer, advertises in this paper.

W. E. HARLAND, the well-known stage-manager and comedian, has entered into partnership with J. J. Magee (late of Bernard & Magee) of the amusement agency, Philadelphia, Pa., noticed in another column. The new firm will be known as Harland & Magee. Charles Young has been engaged as assistant-manager and corresponding secretary.

BAYLIES & KENNEDY'S BRIGHT LIGHTS, with Jo. Baylies manager, C. H. McDonald advance and press agent, Paul Dresser stage-manager, and G. H. Johnston scenic-artist, are to open their season at the Lyceum Theatre, Chicago, Sept. 1. The company comprises T. A. and J. E. Kennedy, W. T. Bryant and Lizzie Richmond, W. J. Mills, Cronin and Sullivan, Harry Melville, Rice and Barton, Paul Dresser, Madge Alston and Smith and Ryan. Route from Chicago: Defiance, O., Sept. 10, 11, Akron 12, 13, Bradford, Pa., 14, 15, Philadelphia (Grand Central Theatre) 17, one week, Buffalo (Lange's Adelphi) 24, Baltimore (Monumental Theatre) Oct. 1, Detroit, Mich. (White's New Theatre), 8, one week each.

HARRY MONTAGUE, the well-known stage-manager, accompanied by the Duncan Sisters—Carrle and Sophie—arrived in New York last week, after a successful tour in the Western States. Mr. Montague recently withdrew from the management of the Adelphi Theatre, San Francisco, and is at present enjoying a vacation here. He is prepared to arrange for Fall and Winter dates. See advertisement.

A PROPERTY MAN wants an engagement. See Geo. Gale's card. AT BOLAND'S HUCKINGHAM THEATRE, Gainesville, Texas, the attractions the past week were James Mullen, Kohler and Connors, Nora Taylor, Nellie Tyler, Emma Kirby, Clara May, Larkine and Kelly, the Foy Sisters—Alice and Ellen—Clara Abbott, Grace Shepard and Tilley Saxley.

SKETCHES and songs are written to order by Edward Greeve, who advertises.

DRIVER'S SUMMER GARDEN, Washington, D. C., was well attended the past week. Manager George W. Driver benefits Sept. 7. Arrivals Aug. 20: Tilly's Royal Marionettes, Zoo Zeonett and Mone, Seate, James H. Burton's acrobats, Eugene Mass, Charles H. Stanley and Frank and Lottie Burton. Closed 18: Wells and Sylvano, George Melnotte, Marren Bros., Louise Garland, Sinclair and Carlisle, Fields and Leslie, Alfred Liston, Ellwood, and Nelson the juggler.

WILLIE ELDORA, now performing in his juggling and balancing specialties with Cooper, Jackson & Co.'s Circus, can be engaged after Nov. 1. His address is given in another column.

FOREIGN SHOW NEWS.

NEW PLAYS.

"Freedom" A Failure.
This drama, in four acts, by G. F. Rowe and Augustus Harris, was produced in Drury Lane Theatre, London, Aug. 4. The Sunday Times says of it: "The drama is powerful in the sense of tall talk, in which the British Lion and Yankee Doodle are trotted round the rhetorical arena in a most ostentatious manner, and its magnificent scenery and expensive mounting are alone worth a visit. As a play with any pretension to literary merit it is beneath contempt; in the previous pieces of the sensational series there was something more than a skeleton as a result of the playwright's labors; but in this there is the merest hanging together of a few penny dreadful bones. When there is any dialogue it is too highfalutin for moderate realism; but, as a rule, the audience is troubled with very little of it, and a soft aside is thrown them as a bone to satisfy their craving for something substantial." The scenery, by Messrs. Beverley & Emden, was the most artistic and genuine success of the night. The Bazaar, the English Consulate, the scene on the Nile, and the Temple of Remes were marvellous scenic art. The mounting was excellent, the stage-management on the whole good, though many anachronisms were visible and situations strained. The position of the Temple of Remes on the hill was untopographical in the extreme, and the appearance of H. M. S. Arrow off it still more wonderfully imagined. The dress of the sailors was serious overhauling, and even the gallery, always lenient at Drury, could hardly swallow some of the visible absurdities. Unless some better dialogue be vamped up by the actors and the first scene of the third act rewritten, the drama cannot run long, unless it be for the curiosity of the many-headed. It is a burlesque of the sensational series that have recently been given, and when a manager encourages his own class of piece, fear must be expressed for his future. At the final fall of the curtain there was some hissing, and there was a feeble call, which was at once responded to. Augustus Harris, who played the hero, is credited with having acted forcibly and being well made up; but the dialogue he uttered was either washy or ridiculously high-flown and out of place. G. F. Rowe, who impersonated an American millionaire, Andrew Jackson Slingsby, was cool and consistent, only phlegmatic; but his American tinge was not true to nature, and his coldness with his fiancée led a gallery member to shout out "Kiss her!" which led to the first genuine roar of appreciative applause of the night. Harry Jackson as a German servant was comic in get-up and by-play, but his German smacked of Whitechapel, which was relieved by his mercenary comments on his half-dollar presents from the Yankee.

"The Bright Future."
A drama in four acts, by Nelson Parry, dedicated the Grand Theatre, Islington, London, Aug. 4. "With an attempted antic and a real horse and cab in the first act, a man overboard in the second, a coming together of those in search of each other in the third, and a fearful death-struggle in the last act, there is surely sensation enough, and when the first two acts play closer the piece will prove well suited to the audience for whom it is intended."

"The Rocket."
A. W. Pinero's three-act comedy, which was produced in Liverpool July 30, and briefly referred to in our past issue, was thus reviewed by The Era: "Everything favored the production of the comedy, and the first night's display of the new literary framework may be fairly said to have passed off with considerable brilliancy. The 'gunpowder' used in the manufacture of the piece is dry, and there was no mere fizzing or misfiring to check the brilliancy of 'The Rocket's' first ascent. The author was himself present to watch the first performance, and the cordiality of the call given to him at the close furnished convincing evidence that his efforts in this instance were highly successful. The part provided for Edward Terry is one of rare excellence, bringing the artist's powers into active and prominent operation; and if there be little ludos for any other character-representative the public can hardly complain, as the author honestly announces the special object and person he had in view in writing the play. The Chevalier Walkinshaw, in the name of the adventurous and shady hero, who, as will be surmised from the title given to the comedy, goes up like a rocket and comes down like a stick in his social life. The conception of the part may not be quite original, but one forgets anything like imitative limning in view of the fact that the character has a true Thackerayan tone about it, and that it is realized with an amount of comic force and artistic power which could hardly be excelled. While furnishing much valuable material in the form of brilliant dialogue, well-marked characterizations and comical situations, it is certain that much of the success of the play was due to the exceedingly clever acting of Mr. Terry, whose humor is unbounded. As Walkinshaw he displays humbug in its strongest light, wheedling the rich and making capital out of the most impudent and barefaced trickery and imposition. Going up and coming down in the world of fashion, alike showing the points in the hero's nature, and no opportunity was missed of making the leading part worthy of its prominent place. The first scene is laid in Dinant-sur-Meuse, where in the garden of the Hotel Belle Vue we make the acquaintance of Lord Leadhall, a youthful nobleman, who evidently aspires to the additional title of 'masher.' Leadhall, who is traveling for pleasure, is anxious to find a companion to assist him to kill time by playing billiards, and he joyfully accepts the advent of Joslyn Hamersmith, who promises to have a game. In the course of conversation between these two gentlemen we learn that the Chevalier Walkinshaw and his daughter Florence are staying at the Belle Vue. The Chevalier is evidently not held in much esteem by the two young men, but we speedily discover that the daughter, in Joslyn's case at least, is not included in the same category; in fact, it is patent that he is badly wounded by Cupid's arrow. The friendly chat is interrupted by John Mable, who comes to bid good-bye to Joslyn before leaving for England. Leadhall having been got rid of, Mable, who is simply a traveling acquaintance of Joslyn's, confides to him the reason of his sudden departure. It appears that when a young man he had the misfortune to lose his wife, who left behind her as a last pledge of her affection a little daughter. Wanting to better his fortunes, which were not then in a flourishing condition, Mable resolved to go to India; but, being unwilling to expose his child to the hardships of the journey, he left her in his brother's charge. For ten years he heard regularly from his fraternal relative, to whom, from time to time, he sent remittances, but after that period his letters suddenly ceased. Shortly afterwards he was enabled to leave business for a time, and immediately set off for England. It was all in vain, however, that he searched for his daughter—neither she nor his brother was to be found—and, as he was threatened with the loss of his situation if he remained away any longer, he was reluctantly compelled to return to India without having seen his child. A few years after this, having made his fortune, he retired from business, and again returned to his native land to prosecute the search for his missing daughter; but, up to the present, all his efforts have been fruitless. His reason for leaving Dinant now is that he has received a wire from his lawyer in London saying that there is a girl named Florence in a school near the metropolis. Mable is then introduced to Florence Walkinshaw by Joslyn, and, being much struck with her appearance as he bids her good-bye, asks permission to call her Florence, as the name reminds him of his daughter, and expresses a hope that he may see her again in London. The coast being clear, Joslyn embraces the opportunity and bids Florence; but, unfortunately, just as he is imprinting a kiss upon her rosy lips, Walkinshaw comes out of the hotel. For some moments he is almost speechless with indignation, and as Florence that he is astounded that a daughter of his should allow herself to be kissed in the broad daylight, which operation, if performed at all, should always take place behind a door. Joslyn, of course, then explains that he wishes to marry Florence, and formally commends her hand. Walkinshaw demurs at first, but, when he learns from Joslyn that he is heir to a large estate, gives his consent, stipulating that his future son-in-law shall make his welfare his particular care. A month being supposed to have elapsed since the events just narrated, we find ourselves at the mansion of Lady Hamersmith, the widow of an alderman and Joslyn's mother, in Portman square. Joslyn has naturally introduced his fiancée and her father, who are staying in London, to his mother, little guessing the consequences to follow. The widow falls in love with the fascinating Chevalier, who, knowing her to be possessed of a large fortune, is not slow to respond. A stormy scene concerning this ensues between the mother and son, the latter doing all in his power to persuade her to give up her foolish attachment, but in vain. Further recrimination is prevented by the arrival of Rosaline Fabreque, a young French widow, and her lover, who turns out to be our old friend Lord Leadhall. Directly afterwards John Mable, who has not yet found the object of his search, is announced, Rosaline starting violently at the name. She tells Lady Hamersmith that Mable was the name of her husband, whom she devotedly hopes to be dead, and the widow thoughtlessly introduces her to John as a lady who knew his brother. He is, of course, very much excited, and tries to gain some information from her respecting his daughter, but obtains nothing more than the name of the lady to whose school she went in Paris. Mable at once makes his adieu, stating that he intends leaving for the French capital immediately, Rosaline and Leadhall shortly after taking the opportunity to depart. Florence and soon afterwards her papa then put in an appearance, and the Chevalier makes violent love to the widow, whom he addresses as Matilda. Florence having retired, Joslyn expostulates with chirp a-vay in my ear, sweet, Und not a vord I'll lose; Und den I'll hug you here ve play, Just me und ba-by fair; So now look out, for to my breast, Und kiss you o'er und o'er; But, quick take care! for you'm a-bout To sail up in de air..... (SPOKEN)—Now!

in de air You'll catch de bounce vonce more....

CHORUS.—(Swinging baby in time to music.)

Up you go, my ba-by, Up there, then here, my ba-by;

High and low, see! there you go, My own lee-tle ba-by boy, hol-lo!

Up you go, my ba-by, Up there, then here, my ba-by!

TROMBONE.

High and low, see! there you go, My own lee-tle ba-by... boy.

ENCORE VERSE.

SPOKEN (To Baby).—Vat, want more, eh? Oh! I see. Vant a nice leetle story, eh? Vell, I'll hafe to "make up" a nice von for de baby. Here goes. Now listen loud:

3. (Slowly).—Oh, Jack und Jill vent up the hill—
To get de poor duff a pie;
Dhey fell on dheir thumb, den softly did hum—
"Oh, vat a big plum am I!"
Miss Mary had a leetle lamb—
Dat run away mit de spoon;
So high-deedle-doodle, de cat und de foodle,
Und de cow flied over de moon.—CHORUS.

them, but, finding them both obdurate, in spite of Walkinshaw's menace to break off his engagement with his daughter, threatens to kick that individual out of the house. This is too much for the lady's nerves, and she consequently faints, and has to be carried into an adjoining room by the gentlemen. Their conversation, however, has been overheard by Florence, who determines that her father shall not make capital out of her engagement, and resolves to take refuge with her old schoolmistress in Paris, for which place she purposes starting at once, via Dover. Walkinshaw and Lady Hamersmith, finding that Joslyn is determined to obstruct their union, plan an elopement, Paris being fixed as their destination. Walkinshaw, thinking he hears Joslyn, who has rather freely applied his boot, coming, bolts into the conservatory, but it turns out only to be Rosaline and Leadhall. Lady Hamersmith then tells the former that she is about to elope, and entreats her to accompany her, which request Rosaline grants conditionally that Leadhall goes too. Walkinshaw is venturing forth from his retreat when he sees Rosaline's face, and with a shriek of horror rushes back. Lady Hamersmith hastens to see what is the matter, and finds the gallant Chevalier decorating his face with palm leaves under the pretext of toothache, but in reality to prevent Rosaline, who is his wife, recognizing him. Some very funny business then ensues, and all arrangements being made, the party start for Dover. The scene then changes to the Lord Gordon Hotel, at Dover, where we find both John Mable and Florence en route for Paris, and delighted to meet each other. Shortly afterwards, Lady Hamersmith, Rosaline, Leadhall and the Chevalier, enveloped in a huge overcoat and still decorated with the healing palm-leaves, arrive. In vain the Chevalier, who has previously believed his wife to be dead, and has no wish to commit bigamy, endeavors to escape from his too-loving Matilda, who avows her intention of not letting him out of her sight until they are married. Matters are further complicated by the arrival of Joslyn, who has received a letter from Rosaline, telling him her intentions, and has suspected she would make for Paris. Joslyn handles the Chevalier rather roughly, and that gentleman, being deprived of the ornamental palm-leaves, is recognized by Rosaline as her husband and John Mable's brother. Of course Florence, as everyone could see from the first, turns out to be Mable's long-sought-for daughter, and the curtain descends on the reunion of the parent and child, and forgiveness of the man who had wronged them.

"Rags and Bones."

by F. A. Scudamore, was produced at the Surrey, London, July 30, it having been originally acted in Cardiff the previous week. Its failure was owing in a great degree to the prolixity of its dialogue. Mrs. Alfred Mellon returned to the stage to play Kitty, and her daughter, Miss May W. Mellon, acted Alice Denby.

"L'Orpheline de Senillac"

(Senillac the Orphan), a drama in a prologue and five acts, by Ernest Morel, was produced at the Nations, Paris, July 25. Only a single scene excited any applause, and the whole texture of the play is too gloomy to become popular. "It is stated that the author derived inspiration for the schism in the Senillac family and the antipathy of the Marquise to her daughter-in-law from the revelations in the famous lawsuits between the Duchesse de Chevreuse and her son's widow, the Duchesse de Chaulnes, whose sad death in Paris last Winter created such a sensation. That cause celebre might well supply materials to a dramatist; but if its incidents form the basis of any part of the plot of 'The Orpheline de Senillac,' it was not apparent to the audience."

A NEW COMIC-OPERA.

"The Three Beggars, or a Night at an Inn," a comic opera in two acts, the libretto by Sinclair Dunn and the music by Ed. Belville, was produced, for the purpose of securing a copyright, in the concert-room of the Royal Academy of Music, London, July 28. The libretto was as destitute of dramatic interest as the music was lacking in freshness and originality.

SPARKS.

GEORGE SANGER'S NEW AMPHITHEATRE, Ramsgate, Eng., was dedicated July 23. It covers little less than half an acre, and has a frontage on High street of 127 feet and on George street of 117 feet.

THE PANDORA THEATRE, London, is to be finished at last. The property was first conveyed to the Pandora Theatre Co., which has been wound up. Then it was taken by a panorama company, which has also been wound up. It was then conveyed to the Alcazar Co., and a petition for the winding up of that company is now pending. The property was first mortgaged for £30,000 to a firm of brewers, and a second mortgage was given for £20,000 to Mr. Nichols, who brought suit to be appointed receiver, also for liberty to complete the theatre, and for liberty to pay the rent—£3,000 per annum. The court granted all his requests July 26.

M. COQUELINS of the Theatre Francaise, Paris, is going to Brussels to create the leading role in a new comedy by Paul Delair, which the censorship of France will not permit to be produced there.

J. G. TAYLOR is to be one of Mary Anderson's supporting company.

SAM H. S. AUSTIN has been engaged by Willie Edouin as manager of his Sparks Co.

YERDI is rewriting "Don Carlos" for the Theatre Italien, Paris. "Herodiade" is to be produced there in Italian next season. Mme. Tremelli and M. Maurel are to be in the cast.

KATE VAUGHN is not engaged at the New Alhambra, London.

MAUD FORRESTER impersonated Lady Godiva in the public procession at Coventry, Eng., Aug. 6.

JOHN L. TOOLE gave a dinner in honor of Henry Irving at the Star and Garter, Richmond, July 29, and dedicated a new theatre in Eastbourne Aug. 2.

LILLIAN RUSSELL, after the withdrawal of "Virginia and Paul" at the Gaiety, London, is to create the title-role in "Pocahontas, or the Great White Pearl," written for her by Sydney Grundy and Edward Solomon.

LURLINE and "Whimsical" Walker were with Hengler's Circus, Dublin, the week of July 30.

J. F. SHERIDAN'S "Fun on the Bristol" opened in Huddersfield, Eng., July 30.

Mr. DICKSON, said to be an American actor, is playing the Chinaman in "The Danites" with Rose Stanley's Co. in the English provinces.

H. C. JASANY'S "Fun on the Bristol" played in the Alexandra Theatre, Liverpool, Eng., during the week ending Aug. 4. The Era says: "Changes in the constitution of the cast have taken place since last visit, but this has in no perceptible degree diminished the full, all-round effectiveness which marked the original production of this piece of jollity and frivolity. Richard Hicks now figures as the Widow O'Brien, and in his hands the part is as comical, characteristic and artistic as could be desired. His acting was full of genuine Irish humor, and he succeeded in keeping a large audience in continuous laughter. Richard Waldon is still a valuable factor in the general representation by his spirited acting in the role of Captain Cranberry, and Harry De Lorme, who recently made his first appearance in England in his original character of Count Menaggio, scored a decided hit. Miss Lizzie Kelsey, Dora; Miss M. Fandelle, Nora; Miss Christine Wright, Bella Thompson; Mr. Arthur W. Wadley, Thomas Cranbury; all helped to make 'Fun on the Bristol' what it professes to be—'funnier than a pantomime.' The staging of the piece was eminently effective."

ATKINSON'S JOLLITIES were at the Gaiety Theatre, Dublin, during the week ending Aug. 4. Report says: "The piece has by no means proved attractive."

JERRY LIND and Otto Goldschmidt (her husband) were among the volunteers at a concert recently given in Malvern, Eng., in aid of the Great Western Railway Servants' Benevolent Fund.

HENRY IRVING'S TOUR, according to The Era (London), is to be thus: Star Theatre, this city, four weeks (opening in "The Bells," second piece, "Much Ado," for Ellen Terry's debut); Chestnut-street Theatre, Philadelphia; the Boston (Mass.) Theatre; Academy of Music, Baltimore; (Christmas Eve) Harry's Theatre, Brooklyn; Haverly's Theatre, Chicago; Olympic, St. Louis; then smaller cities, and open in Washington March 3, 1884, for six nights.

IN BRUSSELS the Communal Council have issued regulations that in future permission must be obtained for the representation of any sensational scene. No explosive substance used upon the stage must be manufactured in the theatre or stored in it. These measures are to be under the charge of a fireman, and are only to be brought to the theatre when required. When fireworks are used they are on account to be discharged in the direction of the auditorium. Notice has to be given to the chief of the Fire-brigade when any fire-scene, such, for example, as that in "The Streets of London," is exhibited. Other minor regulations are ordered with a view of lessening danger from fire.

TWO MEMBERS of the name of Lawes, on creating a disturbance at the Dublin theatre, were called to order by the celebrated Felix McCarthy, who was in the same box. One of them, presenting his card, said: "You shall hear from us—our name is Lawes." "Lawes, is it!" quoth Felix; "then I'll give you an addition to your name," and, exerting his well-known strength, he handed them both out of the box, exclaiming: "Now, by the powers, you're both outlaws!"

M. BARNES made his debut at the Royal Standard Music-hall, London, Eng., Aug. 6, after two successful weeks in Paris, France. He was well received by the audience, and his playing was much appreciated. It is said that he will travel the coming season through Great Britain under the management of Wm. Foote.

THE PROMENADE CONCERTS at Covent-garden Theatre, London, opened Aug. 4. Among the vocalists were Rose Hersee and Joseph Mass.

BERNHARDT denies that she has been engaged to play in "Fedora" for 100 nights this season in the United States. She says it is a false invention to do her harm.

MAUDE BRANSCOMBE began a provincial tour Aug. 6 in Margate, Eng.

FOREIGN PLAYS.—The World, London, Eng., says: "French dramatic authors have at last resolved to combine, with a view to protect their rights in England and America. Dissatisfied with speculating middlemen, who frequently by paying small deposits obtain the refusal of pieces and prevent their direct sale, the authors until the author's rights have expired, and determined to put a stop to general pill ring, they are forming an organization, with a secretary in Paris and another in London, who will deal direct with managers; and the plays will be adapted to the stage of the French author, whose name will be given on the playbill. It is also intended to arrange for the adaptation of successful English plays for the French stage. A well-known dramatic author from Paris has been in London the last few days, and has been in the business, and already arrangements have been made for the adaptation of two dramas accepted for production in Paris. Both are of strong interest, and abound in novel situations. They will probably be produced simultaneously in London and New York."

ASSAS(S)-INATION.

The Bray of an Ass, for which Good Reasons are Assigned.

TO MY DEAR FRIENDS THE PUBLIC, AND TO MY BRETHREN AND SISTERS OF DRAMATIC, VARIETY AND PANTOMIME ASSOCIATIONS:

It is with feelings of regret, deep regret, that I am compelled to retire from my profession the coming season.

My withdrawal is not of my own volition, but is compulsory by reason of the peremptory orders of my distinguished medical advisers. Howard Long, M. D. of Wabash and E. Van Vliet of Northwestern fame, who, after consultation with a society of brother-physicians of the section, concluded that riding in baggage-cars was injurious to my welfare, mental and physical.

I do not believe in their diagnosis of my case. They are just too mean for anything. I know I always enjoyed the best of health—as good, at least, as the majority of the girls, and I think it a downright shame—there now! I suspect that their stern edict was caused by mean, petty jealousy, as although I am not a masher in the common acceptance of the word, I succeeded in crushing many a Train Hand.

I think we ought to form a brotherhood, with the Vicar of Bray and Dr. Neigh as President and Vice. Then let the authors of my ruin, the aforesaid Howard Long and E. Van Vliet, beware, as I can strike from the rear as well as from the front. By their action they have deprived the stage of a second Lotta, as my sister has been compelled to go to Europe for her voice, while my bray is dislocated through grief, and I retire to my mansion, not in the skies, but at No. 19 Congress street, Chicago, to which I may be addressed in care of "The Father of Clowns," Tony Denier. By the way, I won't have a chance to mash Tony's two clowns the coming season. I should bray not. It is to be hoped that my genial employer, the aforesaid Tony Denier, will be able to exist one season without me. My doctors are bound to differ shortly, and I shall not die in the meantime.

LOTTA DENIER.

Better known as "Tony's Ass."

P. S.—I weep for the Marks of the future.

VARIETY HALLS.

THE VINE-STREET OPERA-HOUSE, Cincinnati, since our last article has been well patronized. The arrivals Aug. 20 included the Allen Sisters, the Hart, Baby Hart, Dolan Bros., Wada and Laclede, Pauline Batcheller, the Everetts, and Victoria and Mendoza. Closed 19. Little Carroll, Gibson and Pierce, the Milnes, Sweeney and Ryland, J. Arthur Doty, Clarence and Warner, Lester and Walker, Malville and La Rose and Leonzo.

NEGRO MINSTRELS.

Haverly's Minstrels, writes our Boston correspondent, "have played throughout the week just closed at the Boston Museum to a series of fashionable and delighted audiences, and the seating capacity of the theatre has been at times severely tested. Everybody has scored a hit more or less, and the troupe in its entirety has left a most favorable impression in the Hub. They closed to a jammed house Aug. 18." The company, under the management of Joseph A. Gulick, includes Hughie Dougherty, Bobby Newcomb, Billy Richardson, Edward Grand, Harry J. Armstrong, J. Carroll Johnson, Walter Carpenter Hawkins, Johnson and Fowlers, Charles V. Seamon, Paul Vernon, the octet-Joseph Garland, J. W. Myers, Charles Young, Walter Hawkins, Charles Bishop, Ludwig Rafter, Edwin Harley and Henry Dunbar—Augustus E. Herwig conductor and Will N. Wood leader. A. C. Comstock Jr. is supervisor of amusements; Fred E. Wright, assistant-manager and treasurer; John S. Robinson, stage-manager; Frank McKee, general agent; Chas. Van Sicken, advertising agent. A feature of their programme is the handsomely costumed operetta of "The Princess of Madagascar," a description of which may be found in the press-extracts in our advertising department. The company opens at Whitney's Grand Opera-house, Detroit, Mich., Aug. 28, English Opera-house, Indianapolis, Ind., 30, and the Grand Opera-house, St. Louis, Mo., Sept. 2.

Bain's Minstrels rehearsed last week at the Windsor Theatre, Boston, Mass., and started Aug. 29 on their annual tour. They play two weeks in New England, and open the Windsor season Oct. 1. The company includes Lew Benedict, Joe Hart, Harry Pearson, Prince Pharoah, Conway Mack, Kennedy and Clark, P. C. Shortis, Theo. Jackson, J. H. McMurray, Harry Nelson, C. A. Wilson, Charles Arvidson, J. H. Tower, Frank Spengel (leader of orchestra), Matt Elder, Chas. E. Cook and Joe Elmore.

Duprez & Benedict's Minstrels, says the manager, on account of being disappointed in receiving new lithographs, will not open their season on Aug. 20, as intended, but will begin rehearsals on Monday, Sept. 3, and open Sept. 10 with a company of fifty performers.

J. M. Woods, tenor, and his wife were honored with a serenade at Greenport, L. I., by the band of the Manhattan previous to their return to New York, where Mr. Woods joins the San Francisco Minstrels.

PERFORMERS are wanted for Warren & Chandler's Minstrels. The season will open Sept. 15. Apply to W. S. Chandler, whose address find elsewhere.

KIT CLARKE, manager of Haverly's Minstrels, has placed in the Fidelity Co. of New York an accident insurance upon all the members of his company. The total amount is $5,000. The policy covers accidents of any nature that may occur during the entire season, and is, undoubtedly, a judicious investment.

BARLOW, WILSON & CO.'S MINSTRELS opened the season at the Park Opera-house, Erie, Pa., Aug. 13, to a full house, and gave satisfaction. Frank Moran, Billy Carter, Howard and Hall, John Dally, Fritz Lyon and Clark (musical-trio) and W. S. Cleveland formed the troupe there. Ferguson and Mack are to join in Baltimore, Aug. 27. H. J. Clapham, manager, gives their route: Norfolk, Va., 20, Petersburg 21, Lynchburg 22, Stanton 23, Richmond 24, 25, Baltimore 27, one week.

SCHOOLCRAFT AND COES closed with Barlow, Wilson & Co.'s Minstrels in Milwaukee, Wis., Aug. 11, and were given a banquet by the members of the company. Luke Schoolcraft was presented with a set of diamond studs. E. M. Kayne making the presentation-speech, to which Mr. Schoolcraft responded in a pleasing manner.

THE ARMSTRONG BROS.' MINSTRELS commenced an engagement of three nights and a matinee Aug. 20 at Ford's Opera-house, Washington, D. C.

BARLOW, WILSON & CO.'S MINSTRELS open the regular season of the National Theatre, Washington, D. C., Sept. 3.

THE SEASIDE BROS., Augusta, Ga., is to be opened by the Armstrong Bros.' Minstrels Sept. 3. The Armstrongs are natives of that place, and Banks Winder, one of their vocalists, also belongs there.

AN ORCHESTRA-LEADER and other musicians are wanted for Sol Sam's Minstrels. Apply as per advertisement.

MCGURK AND HUGHES of Duprez & Benedict's Minstrels, who are summering at Dover, N. H., had a substantial benefit there Aug. 17. Among those who assisted were Chas. Brickwood, James Rossett, Will E. Cate, Ned Markey, Willie Howard, Taylor and Tacker's Orchestra and the Dover Cornet Band.

A BASS SINGER and interloper is wanted for Cal Wagner's Minstrels; also a clarinet-player. Address E. B. Brown, as per card elsewhere.

SEVERAL MUSICIANS are wanted for W. R. Briggs' Boston Operatic Minstrels. See card.

MISCELLANEOUS.

STATE AND COUNTY FAIRS.—A list of the fairs to be held in this country may be found on page 366.

THE METROPOLITAN THEATRE, Louisville, Ky., is to rent. It is announced as having been put in excellent condition. The Exposition in that city will, it is expected, make this a profitable place. W. Judah's advertisement gives further particulars.

GEO. H. LENOX, general agent, advertises his address. A horse with six feet, paintings, etc., for sale. See Wood & Co.'s card.

LUNG TASTERS, lifting-machines, flat-strikers, etc., are advertised in another column by the manufacturer, E. G. Smith. He states that these machines are very showy and well made.

THE SCENIC AND STAGE BELONGINGS of the Jersey City Opera-house are advertised for sale. The opera-house is being torn down.

A PUNCH-AND-JUDY MAN and a door-talker are wanted for Vambold's Circus. See L. A. Washburn's card.

ACCUSED OF MURDER.—The Miner of Butte, M. T., of Aug. 9 says: "Prof. C. A. Lewis, who is well known in Eastern Montana, having traveled through that section with a magic and sleight-of-hand performance, is charged with the commission of a terrible crime near this city yesterday. A beautiful young lady, known on the bills as Eva, traveled with him and assisted him in the performances. She was about sixteen years of age, and he claimed she was his daughter. They arrived in Dillon two weeks ago, coming with their own wagon and team, and went into camp about two miles below the city.

About 4:30 yesterday afternoon Lewis was seen by some carpenters who were working near by carrying the young lady towards the bridge which crosses the river near their camp. The unusual spectacle aroused their suspicion that something was wrong, and, running to the spot, they were horrified to find the lifeless body of the girl, with the whole top of her head blown off. They took Lewis into custody and carried the body back to the wagon, where they found a shot-gun with one barrel discharged and the inside of the wagon cover splattered with blood and brains. A coroner's inquest was held upon the body, and a verdict rendered that the girl came to her death by a gunshot wound inflicted by A. C. Lewis. * * *

Upon searching the effects of Lewis and the girl letters were found which prove that she was not his daughter, but a Miss Eva Clark of Chicago, whom he had engaged to travel with him. She was highly accomplished and a fine musician. There was strong talk of lynching the prisoner, but no attempt was made to do so. The jail is strongly guarded.

THE MANAGEMENT OF MOORS. Coup & Levantine at the Pavilion Theatre, Falls Field, Rochester, N. Y., terminated Aug. 18. The theatre will hereafter be under the management of J. W. Randolph of New York. The Grau Comic-opera Co., which closed 18, opened in Boston, Mass., 20.

A BARD, magician and others are wanted by Frank E. Piper, who advertises.

WOOD-ENGRAVERS of every description can be had at most reasonable prices of Mark Roylance & Co., whose advertisement on another page gives an illustration of the style of work they execute.

THE BUILDING known as the Florentine Hotel, opposite the Grand Opera-house, Cincinnati, is undergoing changes and will open Sept. 3 as Harris' Museum. Three performances will be given daily. Among the opening attractions promised are Zeltner and Christie's "Humpty Dumpty" Co., Baby Bindley, Bates the giant and wife, and others.

MANAGER P. HARRIS of the Museum, Pittsburg, Pa., is in Cincinnati, but will return to open the Museum Sept. 3.

THE PITTSBURGH EXPOSITION opens Sept. 6, and will close Oct. 13.

A LOT OF SPECIAL CUTS now ready or in active preparation for the new printing to be issued by the Great American Engraving and Printing Company is given in a card elsewhere.

A FEMALE SNAKE-PERFORMER is wanted at Harris' Museum, Cincinnati O. See advertisement.

SONG-SHEETS suitable for fairs, etc., are advertised by N. Ruggles.

BOARD can be had at Mrs. L. Cleary's advertised address.

C. A. BRADENBURGH is now located at Hagar & Campbell's Dime Museum, Philadelphia. He has withdrawn from the Globe Museum, this city. He advertises in another column.

THE DENVER (COL.) DIME MUSEUM is reported as doing an excellent business. Curiosities, etc., are wanted. The museum is on the ground-floor, and adjoining a d over the same is the Academy of Music, advertised as having everything of the best in its fittings. Max Kaufman is the manager. Dates will be arranged. F. T. Hughes is the owner of both establishments.

CANDY-BUTCHERS are wanted for Hall's Great Western Show. See Long's card.

ATTRactions are wanted for the Keytesville (Mo.) fair. See W. E. Hill's advertisement.

CHARLES C. GRIFFIN is inquired after by his sister, Sarah Ann Cooper, whose address is given in another column.

A FIVE-LIGHT bulb and other curiosities are for sale as per E. Stephens' card. Mr. Stephens has just completed a mechanical working-model of the Bay of Naples and Mount Vesuvius, with real water-effects, etc. He will exhibit it this winter.

ODD-FELLOWS' HALL, Saccarappa, Me., is open for rental. See C. B. Woodman's advertisement.

MAGICAL APPARATUS is advertised for sale by H. Rodgers.

ASTOR & STUYVESANT'S DIME MUSEUM, Boston, Mass., has been undergoing extensive alterations and improvements during the summer vacation, and will be opened Sept. 3. Attractions of every description are wanted. A few privileges are to rent. William Austin and Frank P. Stone are the proprietors. See card.

PROF. LA VEEB, high-rope walker, is due in Bowling Green, Mo., 25, New London 23, Hannibal 24, Palmyra 25, Monroe City 26, Paris 28.

FLYING-HORSE MACHINES, velocipedes, etc., are made by Waggoner & Bentley, who advertise.

A HOT-AIR BALLOON is for sale. See Wm. Rowe's card.

ALF BURNETT writes to THE CLIPPER from London that he has been to Antwerp and Brussels. He is to join James Taylor, comique, and they are to be under the management of George Ware.

MERRIS & WILSON are now the sole managers and proprietors of the Seaside Aquarium, Cone Island, and of the Globe Museum, 298 Bowery, this city, having bought out the interest of their late partner, C. A. Bradenburgh. Communications are solicited from curiosities and specialists. See card. The Globe Museum will reopen Sept. 15.

A PROPERTY-MAN is wanted for a combination. See advertisement.

FAIRY-ACCENTIONS, either captive or free, are made by S. A. King, who advertises particulars. He has an interesting feature in the grotesque balloons, which he sends up separately or in connection with the large balloon-ascensions.

A PANOPTICON is offered for sale by Wm. Wentzel, who gives further particulars in our advertising department.

A PARTNER is wanted for a slack-wire act. See Geo. La Rosa's card.

THE LOVENBERG FAMILY can be addressed as per card.

A SIDSHOW ATTRACTION is wanted for the fairs by F. M. Black, who advertises.

A WARDROBE and plays are offered for sale by "Shepard," whose address find on another page.

AN OX with three horns, three eyes and three nostrils is for sale. See G. M. Keely's card.

A SCENIC-ARTIST, a property-man and a stage-carpenter are offered positions at the Theatre Comique, Washington, D. C. Address T. E. Snellbaker, manager.

AT THE N. Y. DIME MUSEUM, 565 and 567 Washington street, Boston, Mass., Zeltner and Christie, pantomimists; John C. Leach, sprague, skeleton, and O'Brien, giant, remain this week. Business continues good. Messrs. Keith & Gardner, proprietors, purchased a large seal which was caught by a party of bathers on Crescent Beach Aug. 17, and have placed it on exhibition.

A. ELKHORN'S dramatic, variety and musical agency is advertised in this issue.

PROF. E. C. TAYLOR, illusionist, closed a most successful engagement in Ticonderoga, N. Y., Aug. 16, turning away about two hundred people, who were unable to gain admission to the hall. From there he went to Fort Henry, and opens in Plattsburg 29, for four nights. Burlington, Vt., 27, five nights. His entertainment is noticed as follows by THE Ticonderogian of Aug. 16:

CROWDED HOUSES FOR FOUR NIGHTS AT WEED'S OPERA-HOUSE—Taylor the illusionist favored the citizens of this section with a series of refined entertainments this week. Prof. Taylor is a worthy successor of Houdin, Heller and Herrmann, for truly indeed he seems to be leagued with the spirits of darkness. The illusions presented were in many instances entirely new; among them we particularly noticed the "new growth of flowers," the Turkish box-mystery, aerial suspension and others too numerous to mention. One of the neatest and pleasantest features of the evening's entertainment was the egg-dance by Miss French. This difficult feat was successfully executed by the lady in a style of ease and grace unapproachable. Prof. Taylor will give a fourth performance this evening at Weed's Opera-house.

ELK NOTES.

ROBERT ATR, well known to the theatrical profession as agent for the Pambodie R. R. at Cincinnati and as treasurer of the Cincinnati Lodge of Elks, died at his residence in Newport, Ky., Aug. 18.

AMATEUR.

LILLIAN DUNSTAN, assisted by the Chicago Dramatic Club, will present "The Lady of Lyons" at the Union Catholic Library Hall, Chicago, Ill., Aug. 25. Miss Dunstan has been engaged to travel next season with a professional company.

DEATHS IN THE PROFESSION.

RUFUS ADAMS died recently in Cambridgeport, Mass., and his remains were taken to Lowell for interment. He was born in Chelmsford, Jan. 28, 1817, educated in Lowell at the High-school, and took a partial course at Trinity College, Hartford, Ct. For several years thereafter he taught school, and in the fifties became a photographer in Portland, Me. While there he made the acquaintance of many professionals, and conceived a violent desire to become an actor. Owing to his being in bad health, his friends tried to dissuade him from this course. He, however, made his debut on the stage there, playing Shylock in "The Merchant of Venice," and he met with such encouraging success that he sold out his gallery and entered the profession. After playing a few seasons he found that an actor's life was not so rosy as he had pictured it, and, finding that he had commenced too late in life, he retired from the stage and became a teacher of elocution. In 1859 he settled permanently in Philadelphia, where he had been quite successful as a tutor. He generally had a benefit once a year, when he played some prominent character, and was supported by a number of his pupils. At the time of his demise he was on a vacation-tour of New England.

FREERY BERNARD died of heart-disease at the White Sulphur Springs, Va., at 8:30 A. M. Aug. 15. He was the husband of the late Caroline Richings, whom he married in Boston, Mass., Dec. 25, 1867, and who died in Richmond, Va., Jan. 14, 1882. He was a tenor-singer, and had sung for several seasons with Miss Richings' Opera Troupe prior to their marriage. On Dec. 30, 1867, the troupe began a season in the Academy of Music, in this city, which closed Jan. 18, 1868. When "The Lily of Killamey" was sung for the first time in this city, Jan. 1, Mr. Bernard sang the role of Myles-na-Coppaleen. He was also heard here during a season at the Grand Opera-house, opening Nov. 15, 1869, and closing Dec. 11. The troupe virtually disbanded in 1871. With his wife Mr. Bernard again entered the operatic field in 1875, and again in 1877, when, with their troupe, they journeyed as far as San Francisco, Cal., where they began a season in the Bush-street Theatre Sept. 17. In 1880 the Bernards settled in Richmond, Va., where they were at the head of a Conservatory of Music and the leaders in musical circles. A little comic opera composed by them and entitled "The Duchess" was produced there July 30, 1881, and they frequently took part in local entertainments. Since his wife's death Mr. Bernard had continued the teaching of music there. He had recently completed, with the exception of a few numbers in the third act, a new opera, which competent judges have pronounced meritorious. His real name was Peter Bernhardt, and he was born in New York City of Jewish parents about 45 years ago. His remains were taken to Richmond, where the funeral took place Aug. 16 from the Grace Episcopal Church, and was attended by a large concourse of people.

MISS BLANCH STAMPS died in Melbourne, Australia, July 16, after a very short illness. She was a native of England, and had been playing at the Theatre Royal. She was the wife of Mr. Garner of Williamson, Garner & Musgrave, proprietors of that theatre.

Mrs. J. A. HODGES.—Concerning the death of this well-known actress R. E. Stevens writes: "My sister-in-law Mrs. J. A. Hodges (Amelia Madden) died of heart-disease at the residence of her brother Wm. Madden, No. 320 West Twenty-sixth street, New York City, Friday, July 27, at 6 P. M., and was buried in Woodlawn Cemetery Sunday, 29." She was a native of England, and came to this country in 1842 with her father and several of her sisters. The family were all good musicians, and they made a tour of the United States as a "Female Brass Band." She subsequently married J. A. Hodges, a popular actor, and made her debut on the stage in the Metropolitan Theatre, Buffalo, N. Y. She had played in all of the leading theatres of the country, and was a favorite and capable actress. JOHN ARMOUR died in Detroit, Mich., Aug. 14. He had been in the circus profession for fifteen years, and had traveled with Joel Warner, George De Haven, E. W. Higgins and others. His wife and his mother survive him. He has been requested to state that his widow would be pleased to hear from Mr. Armour's many friends whom he had befriended.

DEATH OF "JIM" GLASS.—The veteran sporting-man James Glass died at his residence, 69 Vanderbilt avenue, Brooklyn, N. Y., on Sunday, Aug. 12, after a long and painful illness, in the fifty-fifth year of his age. For many years deceased had been well known in sporting circles, and during his long residence in New York City was a conspicuous figure at almost every event of importance. For some time he was proprietor of that once noted public house the "Ivy Green," on Elm street, in the rear of the Tombs. Fifteen years or so ago he removed to Brooklyn, and for a long time was proprietor of the hotel at the entrance to Deerfoot Park, which became a popular resort. In early manhood he was foreman of Engine 21, in this city. His funeral took place on Tuesday afternoon, Aug. 21, and was largely attended.

REVISER of "The American Kennel and Sporting Field," by Arnold Burgess, has been published by D. S. Holmes, Brooklyn, N. Y. As most sportsmen are familiar with Mr. Burgess' reputation as a writer, the simple announcement that a revised edition of his book is in the market will be enough to secure a demand for it. The work, which contains a great deal of information in regard to sporting-dogs, is handsomely gotten up, and illustrated with thirty-two engravings.

MARK ROYLANCE & CO.
THEATRICAL WOOD ENGRAVERS
 "CLIPPER BUILDING" 88 & 90 CENTRE STREET
 NEW YORK CITY.

Scenes from Acts, Positions in Character, Illuminated Posters, Illustrations for Window-hangers, Programmes, Dodgers, Letter-heads, Envelopes, etc.,

ENGRAVED ON WOOD
 from the size of a postage-stamp to a 100-SHEET STAND OR LARGER, in one or more colors, for Opera, Burlesque, Minstrel and Circus Troupes, Dramatic, Pantomime and Variety Combinations.

ONE ENCAGEMENT
 will more than repay the small cost of engraving ten times over. Many ordinary performers have procured REMUNERATIVE ENGAGEMENTS by having Good, Attractive Wood-cuts to forward to Managers.

WILL IT PAY?
 The profits from the Show business invariably depend on the business capacity of the Manager. One Manager by judicious advertising will make

A FORTUNE
 with a play possessing very little if any merit, where another would utterly fail with the best stage production for the want of proper

PICTORIAL DISPLAY.
 Wood Cuts are of Great value to professionals in making engagements; a Showy Picture on an Envelope, Programme or Letter Head will surely attract the attention of Managers, and often secure a date.

I desire this Cabinet Parlor Organ introduced without delay, hence this GREAT REDUCTION, IN ORDER TO HAVE IT INTRODUCED QUICKLY. Regular Price, $115.00.

expired, as the AUTUMN and WINTER MONTHS are fast approaching, when I sell thousands at the regular price. Read the following brief description, and let me hear from you anyway, whether you buy or not.

25 USEFUL STOPS, AS FOLLOWS:

1. VOICE CELESTE.—The sweet, pure, exalted tones produced from this Stop are beyond description.
2. POWERFUL BOX SUB-BASS.—Nov and Original. The thundering tones produced from this Stop are without a parallel in Organ building.
3. DOUBLE OCTAVE COUPLER.—Doubles the power of the Organ. Couples octaves right and left.
4. PICCOLO.—Variety of music which makes the Piccolo the most difficult and expensive Stop to build in the world.
5. SAXAPHONE.—The beautiful effect of this Stop is "Beauty's favorite." It is very excellent and adds greatly to this wonderful Organ.
6. FRENCH HORN.—A Stop which imitates a full orchestra and brass band.
7. DIAPASON.—Draws a full set of tuneful Golden Reeds.
8. PULCIANA.—A full set of Reeds used in ordinary Organs is drawn by this Stop.
9. VOX HUMANA.—Tremulant, which, by the aid of a FAN WHEEL, imitates the human voice.
10. VOX JUBILANTE.—This Stop, when used in conjunction with Stops Nos. 3, 4, 5 and 6, peals forth most delightful music.
- 11.—Solonian. 12.—Clarinet. 13.—Cello. 14.—Viola. 15.—Clarinella. 16.—Grand Forte. 17.—Melodia. 18.—Bourdon. 19.—Viol di Gamba. 20.—Viola Dolce. 21.—Grand Expression. 22.—Harp Solonian. 23.—Echo. 24.—Aerostatic Expression Indicator. 25.—Grand Organ. The last fifteen (15) Stops are operated in direct conjunction with above ten (10) bringing forth, at command of the performer, most charming music, with beautiful orchestral effect, from a mere whisper, as it were, to a grand burst of harmony. Its THUNDERING TONES, while using the full Organ, must be heard to be appreciated. Height, 70 inches; Length, 46 inches; Depth, 24 inches.

This original Cabinet Organ contains NINE (9) SETS GOLDEN TONE REEDS, as follows:—1st, Five (5) Octave Set Diapason Reeds; 2d, Five (5) Full Set Pulcianna Reeds; 3d, Sweet Voice Celeste Reeds of three Full Octaves; 4th, One (1) Full Octave Powerful Manual Boxed Sub-Bass Reeds; 5th, Two (2) Octaves of Piccolo and Saxaphone Reeds combined; 6th, Set Soft Cello Reeds; 7th, Set Violina Reeds; 8th, Set Jubilante Reeds; 9th, Set Clarinet Reeds. The above Nine Sets of Reeds are original, and are covered by United States Patents.

This PIANO UPRIGHT ORGAN OR CABINET ORGAN contains FIVE Full Octaves, One Manual or Keyboard, Handsome Walnut Case, Receptacle for Book and Sheet Music, Lamp Stands, Handles, Rollers, Treble Upright Bellows, Immense Power, Steel Springs, etc. Right Knee Swell, also Left Grand Organ Knee Swell, by which the full power of this Organ may be obtained at pleasure, without removing the hands from the keyboard. $115.00 ORGANS FOR ONLY $57.00.

In order to introduce this beautiful PIANO UPRIGHT ORGAN without delay, I offer it for only $57.00. CO. order. Offer is accepted and order given within thirty (30) Days from date of this paper. CLIP THIS NOTICE AND MAIL WITH ORDER.

This Notice is sent by any reader of the NEW YORK CLIPPER together with only $57.00 CASH, by P. O. Money Order, Registered Letter, Check or Bank Draft, mailed within the limited time as specified, thereby agree to receive same in full payment for one of my Parlor Organs, New Style, No. 1111. Money refunded with interest at 4 per cent. from date your remittance, if not as represented after sale. DANIEL F. BEATTY.

Friends of yours may desire an Organ. Call their attention to this advertisement. If they are from home may help me extend the sale of these POPULAR INSTRUMENTS I shall certainly appreciate your efforts. So anxious am I to have this Organ quickly introduced that to all who order within Seven days from date of this Newspaper a further allowance of $4.00 will be given.

THE GRANDEST STAGE PRESENTATION EVER CONCEIVED.
WHAT THE BOSTON PAPERS SAY ABOUT HAVERLY.

"Standing-room only" was the sign displayed at the Museum. It gave a false impression. There wasn't even that to be found. - BOSTON POST, Aug. 17.

Haverly's Mastodon Minstrels appeared at the Museum last evening before a large audience. The musical successes of the first part were made by the wonderful soprano Walter C. Hawkins, Joseph Garland's baritone solo, and J. W. Myers' "Land League Band." The humorous songs were richly earned by Billy Richardson, Hughey Dougherty and J. Carroll Johnson. The hit of the evening was "The Dudes' Picnic," with Mr. Dougherty as the Daisy. The great hit of the evening is the spectacular burlesque "The Princess of Madagascar." The costumes are very elaborate and costly, exceeding in richness and design those carried by many operatic companies. The king of the African tribes rolls off the Irish brogue very cleverly as he prances about the stage, clad in loose trousers, a cloak and an undershirt, while the queen, princess, ambassadors and the royal guards make an effective background. J. Carroll Johnson made a very droll king, and he and Hughey Dougherty as the prime minister sustained the burden of the piece. - BOSTON GLOBE.

Haverly's minstrel operetta of "The Princess of Madagascar" is a great success at the Museum. - GLOBE.
HAVERLY'S TROUPE OF MINSTRELS AT THE MUSEUM. - One week's engagement of negro minstrelsy was opened at the Boston Museum last night, Manager Haverly's newly-organized company taking the boards before a crowded audience. So numerous an attendance in the upper tiers is rarely seen at this house, and as for the lower part, the preponderance of ladies and the evident good quality of the entire assembly in the stalls showed that this form of amusement has its admirers in very respectable circles. The present troupe proves to contain first-class talent, as minstrel companies go. The vocalism, especially is strong, three or four of the soloists being superior to the average. The songs last night were very heartily applauded, particularly the work of a phenomenal male soprano. Most of the merriment on the ends in the customary first-part comes from Hughey Dougherty, J. Carroll Johnson, Billy Richardson and Harry Armstrong, and for a finale to this half of the programme there is something rather out of the usual course in the shape of a nautical burlesque.
